They Are Here Two Great Corpses More Land for Us Europe Irritated?

—By Arthur Brisbane—

IMPORTANT NEWS is the arrival of the courageous air travellers from Ireland. For the second time men have succeeded in flying the Atlantic, coming westward.

Soon, of course, regular flights at stated hours will be provided for passengers.

And only a little while ago the idea of any flying was ridiculed. Men progress quickly, once they start.

King George and Queen Mary joined with others yesterday in celebrating the end of 17 years' work, that has restored St. Paul's Cathedral in London to a safe condition.

The fine old building is worth saving.

And in its vault, under heavy stone monuments, lie what is left of two bodies more important to the modern British Empire than any other two.

The story is still current that Nelson was buried hurriedly because it was necessary. When shot down on his flagship, he was put into a cask of rum, at sea, to preserve his corpse from decay, as was customary with important dead sailors, and other sailors are said to have drunk the rum through a hole in the barrel, leaving the admiral without protection, or preservation. The story is not proved.

The United States considers claiming ownership of great areas over which Rear Admiral Byrd flew recently in the Antarctic. We may follow the example of Great Britain and other nations, saying, "That land is ours, for we saw it first." It would add 150,000 square miles to our possessions.

The land and open sea in those regions are valuable already, the water for whale fishing and other live crops, the land for its mineral possibilities.

In years to come, with the shifting of the poles, those lands will be warm and fertile. But that will be thousands of years hence. By that time the earth's governments may think only of making land useful to all human beings, not about grabbing and owning.

Mr. Adolph S. Ochs, back from Europe, fears "we do not appreciate the seriousness of the feeling of irritation against the United States throughout all Europe."

Well-informed Americans know that Europeans hate this country, first, because they owe us money. The borrower never loves the lender. Then, there is plain jealousy. Those nations thought we ought to make their quarrels our quarrels, and agree forever to send our men and money to take part in their fights.

But Europe's "feeling of irritation" need not worry us.

Give the United States enough airplanes, submarines and swift cruisers, and you will find Europe's "feeling of irritation" completely offset by a more important feeling of respect. You don't need their love, if they fear you.

The House has passed the bill to pay the war veterans about $102,000,000 a year additional. The President will veto the bill when it reaches him. The House is expected not to overrule his veto.

The President, explaining his opposition to the bill, says it amounts to $70,000,000 a year more than the Legion itself demanded, and that the greater part of the money would be paid to men not incapacitated in the war, but incapacitated since the war.

Henry Ford will build at least six more big motor ships, of 6000 dead weight tons each, to carry his products across the oceans and to South America.

Gradually Mr. Ford is building up a private fleet as big, in proportion to our times, as that of Jacques Coeur, who helped the French King out of a bad hole, and, as a reward, was falsely accused of murdering Agnes Sorel.

Mr. Ford will get a better reward, let us hope.

While Mr. Ford is building ships, perhaps he will use his mechanical genius experimenting with faster ships. His new motor ships will make 16 knots an hour.

Some day, somebody will build ships to make 100 knots an hour. And that somebody might as well be Henry Ford.

'Among "sad words of tongue or pen" the news includes Mr. Hoover's order that has sent all the wine glasses in the White House to be stored in a government warehouse.

Thin, delicately colored green and red glasses for Rhine wine,

SEE GARRETT SURRENDER IN 3 DAYS

Bondsman Told in Conference With Wife's Representative That She Will Not Flee

Oliver B. Garrett, defaulter on $13,000 bail and former Hub liquor squad czar, will "appear on the scene" within two or three days, ready and willing to stand trial, according to information given Leopold Manfredonia, his bondsman, today.

Manfredonia, who is also bondsman for Mrs. Garrett and Mrs. Lillian V. Hatch, who are under indictment with the former policeman for conspiracy to extort, was in conference with representatives of Mrs. Garrett today.

Court attaches were skeptical of the report of the former rum raider's promised return.

Garrett's likeness and description went into all parts of New England, New York State, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Quebec, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland today on 7000 circulars.

He would not state who these representatives were but said they gave him satisfactory assurances that there was no danger of Mrs.

Plane in the Air for 15 Days

Chicago, June 26 (INS)—With one gasoline tank leaking badly, necessitating night refueling, the endurance plane City of Chicago droned away today above Sky Harbor airport on its 15th day of continuous flight.

The hazardous task of refueling the monoplane was successfully undertaken last night after the tank in the plane's left wing sprung aleak and had to be shut off.

At 11:40 a. m. today pilots John and Kenneth Hunter ended their 356th hour aloft. The two brothers at that hour had only 44 more hours to fly to equal the present world's record set by the St. Louis Robin.

'Richest Baby' to Wed Society Girl

Baltimore, June 26 (AP)—Announcement of the engagement of Miss Anne Seddon Kingsley, Baltimore society girl, newspaper reporter, to John Nicholas Brown of Providence and Newport, R. I., once known as "the richest baby in the world," was made today by her parents, the Rev. Dr. Arthur B. Kingsley and Mrs. Kingsley.

Her father is rector of Old St. Paul's Episcopal Church. Miss Kingsley is a niece of former Senator William Cabel Bruce.

PLANE GOES OVER LYNN ON WAY TO N. Y.

EXTRA

The Southern Cross flew over Boston today at 4:40 p. m., after circling over Lynn.

New York, June 26—Through skies that cleared as it approached the coastline of New England, the Southern Cross was more than half way to New York today in about nine hours of flying. This indicated the plane would traverse the 1200-mile distance from Harbor Grace, N. F., to Roosevelt field in about 14 hours, so as to land there soon after 6 o'clock tonight, and after passing over Lynn and Boston, and other New England cities.

Gloucester, June 26 (AP)—In a message, which the Coast Guard radio station here said was a general broadcast, the Southern Cross reported itself passing over Country Harbor, N. S., at 11 o'clock, Boston daylight time, and heading for Lynn, Mass.

The message read:

"Found clear patch and came down to 1000 feet. Now passing Country Harbor, N. S., on our left. Good weather, with sky partly cloudy at 12,000 feet. Dead course for Lynn, over which we will circle once to say cheerio to Balchen and Melville. SMITH."

The words Balchen and Melville apparently indicated that the ships over Lynn would be for Bernt Balchen and Capt. Frederick C. Melville, members of the Byrd Antarctic expedition.

Lynn is the home city of Melville, who captained the City of New York, Byrd supply ship, and a welcome-home celebration had been arranged for him today.

He was to have Balchen as his guest and it was expected that other members of the Byrd expedition in this territory would join in the tribute to the mariner.

HOOVER'S VETO SUSTAINED

Consideration of substitute legislation designed to overcome Mr. Hoover's objections to the original measure began immediately.

In his veto measure the President again protested the bill sent to him was unjust both to the veterans and the taxpayers. He said he wanted "a square deal between veterans—not unjust discrimination between special groups."

The lengthy veto message reached the House at 1:21 p. m. and enough votes to assure its being sustained had been cast at 1:45 p. m.

The vote for upholding the President was 188 to 182.

A two-thirds vote would have been necessary to override Mr. Hoover.

The Republicans, who had gained a pledge of 154 votes to sustain the veto, jumped up from their seats and shouted and cheered when the vote was announced.

TWO ESCAPE AS PLANE CRASHES

Shortly after taking off from the Boston Airport with a student flier at the controls a biplane took a nose dive today just off the eastern end of the airport with the pilot and the student none the worse save for a wetting.

Shortly after the spill airport attendants who rushed to the scene found Emerson sitting on the center section of the top wing with Lillie seated on the cowling between the cockpits calmly smoking.

"It's great out here," Emerson hailed the airport crowd. "Do not hurry for us. It's cool and if we want to go swimming we can."

Ocean Fliers Go On Air Tonight

New York, June 26 (AP)—Arrival of the Southern Cross at Roosevelt field, L. I., is to be described in nation-wide broadcasts late today and in short wave relays to England and Australia.

Arrangements were made by both the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia System to go on the air at 3:30 p. m. (E.S.T.), to give a report of the landing.

At 10:45 p. m. (E.S.T.), NBC plans to present a 15-minute period of talks by Maj. Charles Kingsford-Smith and the crew.

SOUTHERN CROSS SPEEDS 100 MILES AN HOUR TOWARD N. E. COAST

HEADED FOR LYNN AND BOSTON

today at 12.04 p. m., Boston time, speeding toward the New England coast.

At 11:40 the plane had passed over Musquodoboit harbor, 40 miles east of Halifax.

The first definite report of her progress and location after the takeoff from Harbor Grace, N. F., at 4:00 a. m. was a message saying she had passed over Lawn, a Newfoundland town 100 miles southeast of Harbor Grace.

The next definite report came when she was sighted 13 miles off Scatari island off the eastern tip of Nova Scotia at 9:17 a. m.

At 10:40 she passed over Guysboro and then came the report of her passing over Country Harbor at 11 a. m. and over Musquodoboit harbor at 11:40.

The plane was sighted clearly over Halifax and the markings of the fuselage could be discerned plainly.

The Southern Cross had kept a 1000-foot altitude over the Southeastern coast of Nova Scotia. The weather was fine and clear except for a few patches of fog.

She passed over Tusket, Yarmouth County, at 1:30 p. m. Only a narrow strip of Nova Scotia remained to be crossed before heading for New England. There was dense fog off the coast.

Make Fine Start From Harbor Grace for N. Y. Hop

Harbor Grace, N. F., June 26 (INS)—Capt. Charles Kingsford-Smith and his three companions, who had the distinction of being the first fliers to span the Atlantic, east to west, and land at a regular airport, left here today at 4:05, Boston daylight time, for New York in their gallant plane—the Southern Cross.

From the arrival of the Southern Cross out of the bleak fogs shrouding the rockbound coast of the island early yesterday until her departure today, Harbor Grace had known unparalleled excitement.

Kingsford-Smith announced that he would land at Roosevelt Field, Long Island.

"We intend to fly to San Francisco from New York as soon as possible," he announced.

Bremen's Pilot Rejoices With Kingsford-Smith

Berlin, June 26 (AP)—Capt. Hermann Koehl, who piloted the Bremen in the spring of 1928 on the first westward North Atlantic airplane crossing, has sent Capt. Charles Kingsford-Smith a telegram felicitating him on completion of the second such flight.

"The fact that neither the Southern Cross nor the Bremen succeeded in making a non-stop flight to New York," said the message, "is evidence of the enormous difficulties besetting an east to west crossing of the Atlantic, the greatest of which are the terrific fog banks off Newfoundland."

In an interview Koehl pointed out the striking coincidence that Kingsford-Smith, as well as he, suffered a sudden breakdown of his compass in that part of the Atlantic.

"I am convinced, however, that a non-stop flight from Europe to New York will be accomplished in the near future," he said.

Coste Plans Hop From Paris on Friday

Universal Service Special Cable

Paris, June 26—Dieudonne Coste, the noted French aviator, when informed of the successful Atlantic crossing from east to west of the Southern Cross, today reiterated his intention of leaving this week from Paris with New York as his goal, Coste said:

"Bravo! Kingsford-Smith and his bunch certainly beat the fogs, and their radio should get great credit for their successful flight.

"There is a possibility that I will reach New York if I fly on Thursday of this week. But I probably will takeoff on Friday. I hope I can get across as well as the Southern Cross did."

Eckener Lauds Flight of Ocean Conquerer

Friedrichshafen, June 26—Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of the Graf Zeppelin, said last night:

"The flight of the Southern Cross from Ireland to Newfoundland was an admirable accomplishment, and I pay high tribute to the skill of Maj. Kingsford-Smith and his crew.

"But airplane flights against fog and headwinds will always remain a sport, because on such a flight as this the plane can carry neither passengers nor mail.

12 NEW MOTORS FOR GIANT DOX IN HOP TO U. S.

Sixteen Persons Will Attempt Atlantic Crossing in the Big Dornier Plane

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND
Universal Service Special Cable
Copyright, 1930, by Universal Service, Inc.

London, June 26—The coming transatlantic flight of Germany's giant Dornier, 12-motored flying boat DO-X, with 16 persons and several hundred pounds of mail, is attracting renewed interest in British, German, French and Italian aviation circles in view of the successful crossing of Maj. Kingsford-Smith and three companions from Ireland to Newfoundland.

The work of removing the double hank of German motors and replacing them with 12 American Curtiss Conquerors will be completed by the end of next week at Altenrhein, on the Swiss side of Lake Constance, according to Dr. Claude Dornier.

TRIALS JULY 10

The first trial flights with the new motors are expected to begin between July 10 and 15.

Unlike the small cabin in which Kingsford-Smith and his companions were cooped in their tri-motored Fokker, the DO-X will have a bar and buffet kitchen, with a steward in charge. There will also be opportunity for leg-stretching along the 74-foot corridor that runs through the center of the passenger deck.

Bids to be among the first passengers on what is bound to be a history-making flight continue to come in, the highest price for passage offered being $12,000 Mrs. Reginald Brooks, of Chicago, is the latest to announce her intention to seek passage on the DO-X.

LISTS FILLED

Dr. Dornier, however, informs me that there will not be more than 14 or 15 persons aboard, including the crew, and that all places are filled. It is, therefore, useless, he said, for anyone to make further application.

In the strong headwinds on the northern route and the thick fogs off Newfoundland, Capt. Chris Christiansen, the German war ace and chief security commander of an ocean steamer, who will be chief master of the DO-X, sees justification in selecting the Azores-Bermuda-New York route.

Dr. Dornier, the designer and builder of the plane, will not make the Atlantic crossing, as he will be in the United States at the time. But he will be represented aboard by his brother, Maurice Dornier.

Fritz Hammer, the chief pilot, is expected to arrive at Alten-Rhein from Rio De Janeiro next week, and Lieut. Schidhauer of the U. S. Navy, who will be the DO-X navigator on the ocean flight, is coming from New York.

GARRETT READY TO GIVE UP

OFFICIALS SKEPTICAL

They also added the information about Garrett's return, Manfredini told officials at the Suffolk County courthouse where he went, following his conference, to announce he was not going to surrender Mrs. Garrett and Mrs. Hutt.

It was a prodigious attempt on the part of authorities to enlist the aid of police departments in the search for the fugitive which thus far has been in vain.

With a definite clue that Garrett's high powered automobile was seen at Seaside, N. Y., today, and that the former liquor racket several weeks ago visited a Roxbury bootlegger now conducting a carnival at the Boston police in New York set out for Seaside and Far Rockaway in their quest for the fugitive.

The information came to the Boston officers after a conference with Chief of Detectives John J. O'Brien of Manhattan, who reported the Garrett car at the resort.

Garrett, reported at various places in Greater Boston, New York and Philadelphia, had apparently dropped out of the face of the earth today.

Despite the scourings of 34 policemen and detectives in New York, only the vaguest of reports of his being seen have been gleaned while in Boston several raids failed to unearth any definite clue to his whereabouts or the whereabouts of the woman reported to be accompanying him.

She is declared to be a woman known as "Jackie the Redhead," a prominent figure in the Reinstein murder investigation several months ago.

Mrs. Garrett, indicted with her husband, is reported to be prostrated over the report that the former chief raider of the liquor squad fled Boston with a woman.

It is believed by police that once they can establish definitely that Garrett is in the company of a woman, Mrs. Garrett will turn up anger against her husband.

VISIT RACE TRACK

In a weary chase after the elusive former liquor-raiding czar, Boston and New York police and detectives even visited Coney Island and the Aqueduct race track on Long Island.

Detectives regularly assigned to the track, particularly on the watch for pickpockets, trailed bookmakers and gamblers, believing that if Garrett, a frequenter of race tracks and sporting events were present, he would be laying bets.

Their vigil and trailing were in vain, however, for the dapper form of Garrett did not emerge from the crowds.

NEW YORK ALL SET TO GREET OCEAN FLIERS

British and Irish Envoys Invited to Join in Welcome at Roosevelt Field

New York, June 26 (AP)—A typical New York welcome, including a landing at the Battery, a parade up Broadway and an official greeting at the City Hall, was planned today for Capt. Charles Kingsford-Smith and the crew of the Southern Cross.

In fact, the fliers will be accorded two welcomes, one today at Roosevelt Field, Long Island, on their arrival from Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, and the other tomorrow when the city's official welcome will take place.

BRITISH ENVOYS INVITED.

Grover A. Whalen, chairman, called members of the mayor' committee for the reception of distinguished visitors to accompany him to the flying field. Invitations also were sent to Sir Donald Lindsay, British ambassador to Washington, and Michael McWhite, minister to the United States from the Irish Free State, to be on hand when the plane arrives.

Three assistant secretaries for aviation of the war, navy and commerce departments, F. Trubee Davison, David S. Ingalls and Col. Clarence D. Young, were asked to represent the government.

Nassau County police officials detailed 300 men to handle the crowds gathered to witness the landing. An uncertainty regarding whether the plane would land at Roosevelt Field or at Curtiss Field was removed by a message from Harbor Grace which stated that the fliers would head for Roosevelt Field.

Plans for the official reception were made subject to the wishes of Capt. Kingsford-Smith and his men.

OFFICIAL RECEPTION.

If they agree to the program, they will be taken in an amphibian plane from Roosevelt Field tomorrow to a point in the harbor near the Statue of Liberty where the city boat Macom will pick them up.

Stands erected at the City Hall steps for the Byrd reception last week have been left in place and will be used for the greeting to Kingsford-Smith and his comrades.

Despite dispatches from Harbor Grace saying that the flight would not be resumed until today, hundreds spent yesterday and last night at Roosevelt Field, determined to be on the scene when the Southern Cross arrived.

WILL PHONE FIANCEE

One of the preparations at the field for the arrival was the installation of special telephone equipment to enable Kingsford-Smith to talk to his fiancee, Miss Mary Powell, in Melburne, Australia. A representative of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. said the call, which was being arranged as a courtesy to the flight leader, would be routed to Australia by way of London.

Descriptions of the arrival and welcome will be broadcast over both the National Broadcasting Company and Columbia systems.

King Boris Looks for Wife in North

Copenhagen, June 26—Any proposals of marriage by King Boris to the beautiful Princess Ingrid of Sweden are expected to fall on barren ground. The Bulgarian monarch is scheduled to make a tour of the Scandinavian capitals in the near future in search of royal helpmate to rule his kingdom.

The visit of the bachelor king is a choice morsel of court gossip and is causing considerable speculation throughout royal circles. King Christian of Denmark has no daughters, while his sister, Thyra, is an avowed spinster. Her brother, Prince Harold, is the father of two daughters, both in their teens, modern and independent.

Princess Ingrid

This leaves the field open to the blond Ingrid, but it is considered very unlikely that she would entertain Boris' suit. It is rumored throughout Europe that she has already refused her hand to the world's most popular bachelor, Edward, Prince of Wales. The Crown Prince of Denmark is also reported to have been turned down.

CITES CASE OF JUDGE PARKER

President's Attitude on Labor Is Likened to Treatment of Dogs

Springfield, June 28 (AP)—The election of President Hoover has become a great liability to the Society of Friends, Robert Gray Taylor, chairman of the committee on race relations of the Philadelphia Society of Friends, told the 21st annual conference of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People today.

Mr. Taylor, whose committee joined forces with the N. A. A. C. P. to bring about defeat of Judge John J. Parker of North Carolina, nominated to the Supreme Court bench by President Hoover, told the conference he was ashamed of Hoover's Quakerism.

"I am frank to say that when Hoover was elected some of the best people among the Friends realized the situation to be dangerous and stated that his election was apt to become a great liability to the Society of Friends," Mr. Taylor said. "It has been, in my opinion.

ABUSE OF POWERS

"The use of political power to further the political aims of the President in attempting to break up the solid south by appointing a Republican leader in North Carolina of such limited qualifications as Judge Parker to the Supreme court bench is an abuse of power in my opinion and in the opinion of many Friends.

"It is unQuakerlike so to abuse the power of a high office.

"I feel that I should say that Mr. Hoover never was an active friend. From the time of his return from Europe until his nomination and election he attended meetings but seldom.

"Hoover's attitude toward labor I think he must have got in Burma, where I believe labor is treated like dogs. Hoover's attitude is not exactly similar, since I think he could get more and better work out of it.

CALLS FAIR STATEMENT

"I think that it is an absolutely fair statement of his attitude, and it merely presents another reason why negroes should oppose him. Negroes are largely a laboring group and must do their part to help form laboring groups that they may more easily rise to better places in industry and other fields."

Mr. Taylor's remarks came at the first business meeting of the association, which was devoted to a general discussion of the question: "What course should Negro voters follow?" Each one of the several speakers took the Parker case as an example of what could be done when the negro was furnished with a clean-cut issue, and when the race everywhere co-operated completely and effectively to bring the support of the majority to the side of an active and intelligent minority.

RESCUE NEAR POLE IS TOLD

Flying weather at the South Pole is either very good or very bad—either very smooth or too rough for comfort, Dean C. Smith, one of the pilots with Rear Admiral Byrd reported upon his arrival at Boston Airport today.

Smith flew over from New York to be on hand for the welcome home to Commander Byrd tomorrow. He made the trip in a Colonial Transport plane piloted by Edward Weatherdon.

"Except for the tremendous thrill that the whole party got out of Admiral Byrd's flight over the South Pole, life became dull for the most of the party before they left for home," Smith said. "I got a great kick out of piloting the rescue plane that found Prof. Gould and his party of geologists when they became lost in the Antarctic wastes, but my greatest thrill came with the first sight of the Statue of Liberty on the return trip home."

Smith recounted difficulties of using the compass in the south polar region. The sun compass was the only one that could be used, all others becoming useless because of the nearness of the magnetic pole.

After several more conferences with Commander Byrd, Smith will leave for Sacramento, Cal., about July 1. He will be the guest of Cambridge friends tonight and will leave for New York Saturday morning.

With the mercury up to 86 long before noon and the city baking under a hot sun and a cloudless sky, the weather man promised that showers tonight or early tomorrow morning might have a cooling effect on the Hub.

It was several degrees hotter on the streets than atop the Federal Building, where the mark of 86 was recorded, and the forecaster's reminder that it was 102 in Phoenix, Ariz., didn't help things much.

Getting a slow start, the mercury suddenly shot up four degrees to 82 between 9 and 10 a. m. and was up four more in the next hour. The record warmth for this date is 92 in 1923.

The humidity wasn't anything to get excited about, according to the optimistic attaches of the local Weather Bureau, but they admitted the winds were light and shifting and so of little help.

The beaches at an early hour showed signs of gathering crowds and this evening may set a weekday peak for the season thus far.

A change in the wind to southeast sent the mercury spinning downward in mid-afternoon, and at 4 o'clock it was 77, a decline of 9 degrees from the maximum.

BOY LOSES LIFE TRYING TO SAVE HIS COUSIN

John W. Rock, 11, of 195 Lamartine st., Jamaica Plain, lost his life in the water of Jamaica Pond today in an attempt to save from a similar fate his cousin, Andrew Mulloy, nine, of 1873 Columbus ave., Jamaica Plain.

The Mulloy boy was rescued from death by Michael Degnan, a Boston American employe, who rushed to the aid of the boys as they struggled in the water. He is at the City Hospital suffering from shock and immersion.

Boston police worked desperately to save the Rock boy's life, but he was pronounced dead at the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital after doctors had worked over him more than an hour.

The two boys had gone to Jamaica Pond to try out a new sail boat which the Mulloy boy had been given by his mother yesterday. When it got beyond their reach the Mulloy boy went after it and stepped off into deep water.

The Rock boy went after him and Degnan answered their cries for aid. As Degnan reached the boys they went down, but he managed to grab hold of Mulloy and get him ashore. Degnan recovered Rock's body less than a minute later.

CITY READY TO GREET BYRD

To the world he is Admiral Richard Evelyn Byrd, U. S. N., conqueror of the two poles, master of the air above the Atlantic, explorer and scientist.

Not in a long time have such enthusiastic efforts been made for the welcome of a single individual here. From the moment that the admiral steps from his private car at the South Station shortly before 2 o'clock until well into the evening, city, state and public will outdo themselves in honoring him.

A welcoming parade, exercises on the Common, addresses and music form the background of a spectacle that will be witnessed by thousands.

For thousands of others who will be unable to attend, radio arrangements have been made.

The Boston Evening American will sponsor a radio broadcast over WHDH. It will start at 3:15 and continue until Byrd has retired to his home.

Electrical equipment and microphones are to be set up at the South Station and at the Parkman bandstand on the Common. Listeners will get a detailed description during the gathering of the crowds prior to the arrival of the special train bearing the Byrd party.

Stations WNAC, Boston; WEAN, Providence and WNBH, New Bedford, will also be on the air from 2:30 to 3:15 with accounts of the reception.

NAVY TO SALUTE

As Byrd steps from the train he will be welcomed to Boston by Mayor Curley, J. Philip O'Connell, director of public celebrations, and Adjt.-Gen. Jesse F. Stevens, of the Massachusetts National Guard.

A 13-gun salute, the navy's tribute to a navy man, will be fired from the Charlestown Navy Yard as the party steps out into Dewey sq.

Accompanied by the mayor, Admiral Byrd, Mrs. Byrd and their young son will lead the welcoming parade through the principal streets of the downtown section.

The explorer's car will be escorted by the National Lancers, appointed guard of honor.

AERIAL DISPLAY

Overhead a squadron of 40 planes will roar its salute to the returning hero. The position of honor in the formation is to be given to 10 planes from the naval air station at Squantum, of which Byrd was the first commander. Lieut. Joseph R. Lynch is to lead this flight. In addition, nine regular army planes, led by Capt. Christopher Ford, nine National Guard planes, headed by Maj. Louis E. Boutwell, and 20 commercial planes from the East Boston Airport will take part in the air demonstration.

The parade route, as finally decided, extends from Dewey sq. along Federal st., Milk st., School st., Province st., Bromfield st., Tremont st., Park st. and Beacon st. to the State House.

As the parade reaches the capitol steps, Governor Allen and a corps and bid him welcome to the Commonwealth. Then the scene is to shift to the Common.

CHILDREN TO SING

A second 13-gun salute will be fired as the marchers proceed to the Parkman bandstand. This time the army, represented by the 101st Field Artillery, will pay its tribute to the navy.

Addresses by Governor Allen, Mayor Curley and Porter Adams of the municipal air board are scheduled to be given at the bandstand.

The younger generation will pay its respects to Byrd. One thousand school children, pupils in music classes, will sing under the leadership of Prof. John A. O'Shea, director of music in the public schools.

The governor will give the explorer the State medallion cast for him.

At the end of the afternoon celebration, Rear-Admiral Byrd and his family will retire to their Brimmer st. home for a short rest, prior to the municipal banquet scheduled to bring the day's program to a close.

The dinner will be held at the Copley-Plaza. Governor Allen and Mayor Curley will speak and the latter will give Byrd a gold medallion, the gift of the city. Invitations to the dinner have been extended to Capt. Charles Kingsford-Smith and his companions in the latest transatlantic flight.

DEATH CLAIMS DR. FRANCKE OF HARVARD

Funeral arrangements were being made today for Dr. Kuno Francke, professor emeritus at Harvard and honorary curator of the Germanic Museum of Harvard, who died yesterday at his home, 3 Berkeley st., Cambridge, at the age of 74.

Since his retirement in 1917 after 33 years with Harvard he had continued his work for Harvard as honorary curator of the great museum he was instrumental in founding. He has been in failing health for some time. His widow, Mrs. Katherine Gilbert Francke, and a son and daughter survive him.

CAUSED HIS RESIGNATION

Although he was one of the outstanding German-American citizens of the country, during the World War he publicly declared himself to be an American first, but his outspoken sympathy for the German cause prior to America's entry into the conflict caused him to tender his resignation to Harvard.

It was prompted, he said at that time, by a sense of duty which forced him to resign lest he seem to compromise the university.

Dr. Francke was an author of note, most of his works being on subjects relating to Germany and its people. He was a Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, the American Philosophical Society, and the Medieval Academy of America; he was a Chevalier of the Royal Prussian Order of the Red Eagle and the Order of the Crown.

IN MANY ORGANIZATIONS

At one time he was president of the Modern Language Association, and he held membership in a host of other organizations. Additional fame came to him when he was selected as editor-in-chief of the German Classics of the 19th and 20th centuries.

Dr. Francke was born in Kiel, Germany, September 27, 1855. He was a graduate of Munich and was later honored with degrees from many universities.

When tempted to over-indulge

"Reach for a Lucky instead"

Be moderate—be moderate in all things, even in smoking. Avoid that future shadow by avoiding over-indulgence, if you would maintain that modern, ever-youthful figure. "Reach for a Lucky instead."

Lucky Strike, the finest Cigarette you ever smoked, made of the finest tobacco—The Cream of the Crop—"IT'S TOASTED." Lucky Strike has an extra, secret heating process. Everyone knows that heat purifies and so 20,679 physicians say that Luckies are less irritating to your throat.

"No special dietary, but moderation in eating and drinking and not more than three meals daily," is Dr. F. McKelvey Bell's advice in the New York Medical Journal to all men and women who want to keep a proper figure. We do not represent that smoking Lucky Strike Cigarettes will bring modern figures or cause the reduction of flesh. We do declare that when tempted to do yourself too well, if you will "Reach for a Lucky instead," you will thus avoid over-indulgence in things that cause excess weight and, by avoiding over-indulgence, maintain a modern, graceful form.

MODEL YACHTS RACE SUNDAY FOR HONORS

Starting gun!

Reaching for the grand climax of the Model Yacht Regatta sponsored by the Boston Evening American on Sunday, the first of the trials to select the United States entry in the international model yacht race at Gosport, Eng., in August, began today in the Charles river basin above Larz Anderson bridge.

With a dozen contenders here from various sections of the country—two from Boston—a series of more than 200 races will be sailed today, tomorrow and Saturday to select the model that will attempt to wrest the international cup from England.

On Sunday, over the same courses, the big regatta will take place with several hundred entries, sponsored by the Boston Evening American and under auspices of the Boston Model Yacht Club and the Model Yacht Association of the Community Service of Boston, Inc.

TWO HUB ENTRIES

Boston's two entries for the international trials were selected by the Boston Model Yacht Club after a series of contests on Upper Mystic Lake. They are Westwood, owned by Fred Pigeon, famous mast builder, and Lonach, owned by Alan Forbes of the State St. Trust Co.

The United States has placed second at the Gosport races the last few years, England successfully defeating the title against the challenges of seven other nations. This year, it is hoped, a model able on the wind to wrest the cup will be chosen.

The selection of the judges will be announced Sunday at 10 o'clock at the opening of the big regatta and all of the international trial contestants will be on hand.

23 SILVER TROPHIES.

Entries for Sunday's regatta, at which 12 silver trophies donated by the Boston Evening American will be awarded, are still being received by the Community Service and by Fred Pigeon at his spar shop, 131 Coleridge st., East Boston.

In four classes, competition is limited to boys and girls up to 17 years of age. These are the 15-inch, 24-inch up to 36-inch and 36-inch and over class. In the two other classes, Marblehead sail area and Somerville schooner, there are no age limits.

The Boston Evening American cups will be first and second prizes in each class. Judges will be Pigeon, F. X. McLaughlin and Gunnar Munnick of the Boston Junior Model Yacht Association.

The regatta will start at 10 o'clock Sunday.

WILL CHRISTEN MEARS PLANE

New York, June 26 (US)—Mrs. James J. Walker, wife of the mayor, will christen John Henry Mears' round-the-world flight plane The City of New York at Roosevelt Field today.

The entire plane has been covered with a preparation known as Johnson's wax. It is expected this will increase its speed six or seven miles an hour.

Beside reducing wind resistance, experiments with the wax have proved it prevents ice from forming on the wings and protects propellers from accumulations of dust and dirt.

Auto Thief Kills 2 Officers, Gets Away

Washington, Ia., June 26 (AP)—Sheriff Fred Sweet and Night Marshal Aaron Bailey were shot and killed today by an automobile thief they had arrested. The thief shot the officers after the sheriff started to search him. He avoided another officer who shot at him as he fled. He stole another car and drove away.

Playing Hookey for a Swim Good for Extra Credits

Hartford, June 26 (AP)—Playing hookey to go to the old swimming hole isn't what it used to be. There's no dodging of truant officers and waiting for hair to dry before coming back. Now truants on their return to school demand extra credits.

RALPH WILTS BUT STICKS TO POLE

Signor Ralph "Flagpole" D'Agostino, who holds the aerial championship of Summer st., Brockton, at present sitting, has "bought himself something," as the vernacular would have it.

It seems that the signor is desirous of quitting his post today, but the feminine contingent of the D'Agostino family says "no" in a gentle but convincing tone. Hence, Ralph hangs on.

Yes, there are hard times come up on the Brockton champ. Today, at 2, he starts his 15th day in the air, but the enthusiasm of the early quest for renown has gone like the snows of yesteryear.

"For the life of me," declaims Ralph, "I connot see why I should boil and stew up here when the gate receipts have dwindled to less than a Caledonian collection. Yet the wife says: 'No quarter—but no quit, either.'

"I have reasoned with her, but you know how that is. She reasons right back at me. She reproaches me for quailing when I was on the road to success. She wants to know what the neighbors will say if I show the 'white feather.'"

Ralph was rather resplendent in a new chapeau. A local hattery made the donation. Sort of an oasis in a desert of financial dearth.

Yet, there are hard times. First, the city tears up Summer st. and makes the automobilists detour, thus warding off the traffic that might mean a visit to Ralph and consequent shekels for the D'Agostino exchequer.

Now the same city has spread a coating of oil and sand on the detour street, and only the brave would navigate it. The trouble is that there is little evidence of bravery plus curiosity plus generosity, which is the proper combination for the D'Agostino fortunes.

So, Ralph "Flagpole" D'Agostino hangs on, but the road to fame is rough, and the gallant spirit that prompted the attempt to eradicate "Shipwreck" Kelly's record is drooping. Drooping because the sun is hot, but mostly because the receipts are not.

However, the missus had the last word, and that was, "YOU STAY."

QUEEN HELENE MAY LEAVE RUMANIA

Bucharest, June 26 (US)—It was reported in Rumanian court circles last night that Queen Helene is planing an imediate flight from this country, intending to remain forever an exile.

It is understood that the queen is to join her mother, former Queen Sophia, of Greece, at Frankfort-on-Main, Germany. This step is said to have been brought about by King Carol's refusal to permit the queen to guide the education of their son, Crown Prince Michael, and also because of the liaison between Carol and Mme. Magda Lupescu.

Mme. Lupescu, who is said to be in Vienna, is still most likely to come to Bucharest to be with Carol at the latter's wishes. It is said that the only reason she failed to appear here during the hectic week which followed Carol's ascension to the throne, is that her companion, Mme. Dumitrescu, wife of the king's secretary, fell ill in Vienna.

Nine Girls in Shorts Are Haled Before the Mayor

Grafton, W. Va., June 26 (AP)—Things had settled down pretty well about the town hall today after all the excitement yesterday, but one thing is certain—girls are not going to wear "shorts" on the streets of Grafton as long as Chirley King is mayor.

Nine pretty girls, all wearing "shorts," ambled into town from their camp in the woods. Traffic stopped. A crowd gathered when the girls stopped in a store and bought ice cream cones. When they came out, the crowd followed them. Somebody telephoned the mayor. The mayor wanted to see them—or rather to talk to them.

The young women were informed the next time they come back to town they must—put on more clothes.

That goes, too, for another young star, OLD GOLD. Three years ago, unknown. Today, America's fastest growing cigarette.

OLD GOLD gave a new taste-thrill to jaded palates . . . and a new comfort to sensitive throats through tobaccos that nature had made smoother, mellower, free from all irritants. When a girl, or a cigarette . . . is blessed by nature, a new star rises . . . and fast.

LIFE GUARDS TO GET NEW TEST TOMORROW

Another examination for lifeguards will be held tomorrow by the Civil Service Commission following protests made to a previous test and also to fill a requisition for additional guards made by the Boston park department.

Forty persons have been notified to attend. This number includes a majority of the guards who protested to the commission regarding the scope of the first examination.

Many of these latter have pulled scores of drowning persons from the waters at L st. and other Boston beaches.

It was especially felt by some that bias was shown by Capt. Jack Wallace, who gave the test for the state. They pointed out that Wallace conducts a life saving class at which many of those who sought the life guard positions secured instructions.

Army Flier Saves the Other Planes, but He May Die

Chicago, June 26 (AP)—The best traditions of the army flying corps were upheld by 2nd Lieut. C. W. Feldman, but his valor cost him his life.

Taking off with others of his squadron from Curtiss airport last night, Feldman's plane was caught in the "wash" from the plane ahead. It went out of control. Along in the air he might have righted it, but there was a plane close on either side.

Quickly he "winged over" and crashed 50 feet. His skull was fractured and he was injured internally. His action, however, prevented disaster to the others.

ASKS SENTENCE BE SET ASIDE

A motion was filed in Suffolk Superior Court today on behalf of Samuel Gallo, Revere, awaiting trial for first degree murder in connection with the shooting of Joseph Fantasia on Prince st., North End, June 27, 1927, asking that a sentence of two years in the House of Correction imposed on him by Judge Louis L. Cox be set aside.

Atty. Vincent Garro, acting for Gallo, states the sentence was imposed as a result of alleged tampering with government witnesses in the case of Gangi Cero, who was tried and convicted of the same murder as Gallo. Both men are awaiting new trials in the case.

Both Cero and Galli were found guilty by juries of murder in the first degree in connection with the same killing. Both verdicts were set aside by the court. Both are now awaiting trial. Trial has been delayed by the authorities due to the mysterious absence of Philomena Romana, an important witness.

AMERICANS ARE FAVORED BY LOW PRICE OF SUGAR

Most Nations Pay Much Higher Price for This Product

According to statistics, sugar is one of the cheapest food products bought by the American housewife day in and day out. In Australia and New Zealand, where the per capita consumption is thirty pounds more per year than in the United States, a higher price is maintained.

The standards of this country in refining sugar, not only insure uniform color, granulation, density and purity, but give it unlimited keeping qualities. Besides, Americans are offered sugar in many inviting forms, conveniently packed to suit their needs.

The low price of sugar, its many uses, and the important part it plays in the diet should not be overlooked. It is one of the chief ingredients in wholesome desserts, including puddings, custards and ice cream. It improves the taste-appeal of beverages, nutritious stewed and fresh fruits, also breakfast cereals. Used as a seasoning with salt, sugar heightens the flavor of vegetables rich in vitamins and minerals.

The healthy, well-fed United States Army consumes considerably more sugar per capita than those in civilian life. Inasmuch as the diet of these soldiers is constantly watched by medical and dietary experts, this consumption of sugar is significant. Good food promotes good health. The Sugar Institute.

Clubwomen Want Dean of Girls in High Schools

By NANCY BREWSTER

At the request of Mrs. Ott Hahn, chairman of the division of public instruction, in the General Federation of Women's Clubs, Massachusetts clubwomen will attempt the placing of such women supervisors of girls in the schools of the Commonwealth.

In New York less than 25 per cent of the schools have deans of girls. The percentage of such women in Bay State high school is so negligible as never to have been calculated. But if the plans of the education department of the State Federation of Women's Clubs come through, Massachusetts clubwomen will check up on the number with a view to increasing the total to 100 per cent.

Exerting influences through informal contact on the girls is the chief duty of the deans, Mrs. Hahn explains, although other duties exist. They consist of interviewing girls who have study problems and discovering cases of dull girls unable to do academic high school work and advising them to seek courses of a more suitable nature.

"Cases of despondency, even of delinquency, have arisen from the failure of students to attain required standards of scholarship," Mrs. Hahn says further.

The General Federation of Women's Clubs will continue in the fall to support and push to conclusion the establishment of a department of education in the Federal Government, with a secretary in the cabinet. All state federations have been requested to support this General Federation measure and clubwomen are urged to study the bill as part of its legislative program.

Tea Will Be Held at Bayside by Margaret Brent Civic Guild

The Margaret Brent Civic Guild, an organization of Catholic women, who recently pledged themselves to working for the repeal of the prohibition law, will hold a tea at the Bayside residence of Miss Marguerite O'Brien, July 12. Mrs. Frank Scanlan of Milton, president of the guild, makes the announcement.

A luncheon meeting is scheduled some time in August at Roseclife, the Wessagussett summer residence of Mrs. Rupert Cardin, who then will entertain members of the guild. Date and name of speaker will be announced later.

Code Recommended for Clubwomen in all Parts of Nation

As suggested in the Federation News, the official organ of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, club members should be urged to pledge themselves to the following:

"Silence during program! Helpful thinking during business. Relaxation and fun during social hour. Cheerfulness in accepting and conscientiousness in fulfilling responsibility. Loyalty to all members. Exertion in the interest of the club."

Police Co-operation Assured in Drive to Keep South End Clean

An official delegation of the Boston Rooming House Association held a conference with Capt. John A. Anderson of station 5 yesterday, taking up the problems of the group in the South End, and specifically that relative to rubbish boxes.

The women have complained generally about them, taken their protestations to police officials in the past but with little result. The rubbish boxes have remained on the sidewalks to obstruct traffic and to clutter the path of walking.

Capt. Anderson, new to the district, pledged his co-operation to the women, and asked in turn their assistance in ridding the South End of disreputable street conditions and unscenic effects which such decorations present.

Mrs. Glen Gibbs headed the committee, which included Mrs. Charles Snyder, president of the association; Mrs. John Graham, Mrs. John Henry, Mrs. Joseph Ferry.

The women told the captain they wanted the South End clean, outlined the principles of their association and urged his official surveyance over the district. He promised court action should his request be not compiled with when he served notice that rubbish boxes be removed. The women went away happy and confident that the South End was fortunate in getting Capt. Anderson.

100 Girls Off for Camp Winnecunnet at Vineyard Haven

Another vacation haven in Maine has claimed hundreds of other girls from various parts of the country.

These young girls will have the run of the camp until the regular camping season opens July 12. Mrs. Maude E. Trenholme is camp director, and her staff, preceded the girls to the camp. They are Helen Libby, program chairman; Violetta L. Lette, swimming; Roma Henry, land and water sports; Alice Willey and Mildred Fisher; Eugenia Walsh, music and dramatics; Elizabeth MacDonald, arts and crafts; Connie Billings, general utility; Beulah Sinclipole, head dietitian; Alice Senessa, Inez Marritt, Evelyn Hutchinson and Gwendolyn Keene, food experts; Margaret Harrison, office secretary, and Cornelia Moynihan, camp nurse.

Sheer Fabrics Introduce Fluffy Furs to Mode

From Paris Bureau, Boston Evening American.

Paris, June 26.

THE AURA AROUND this sartorial era is a soft and feminine one, and if such an ethereal body could be analyzed it would be found to consist of chiffon, lace and fur, all of them in delicate, or pastel shades. These delectable fabrics combined with soft and fluffy furs, strike the keynote of a season, which finds more satisfaction in lovely rather than in magnificent or elaborate clothes.

The flowing, gracious lines of the mode lend themselves to such fabrics and treatment, without too much stressing of mere prettiness, a quality which if not cleverly handled becomes lamentably insipid, something which the great majority of women will not tolerate in themselves or in their clothes.

Clever coats go to lunch at the Ritz, and so do clever stylists for at that fashionable resort, the mode as it pertains to town may be observed at its sparkling best. Simplicity is the hall mark of the clothes seen in Paris just now, but a simplicity that is subtly complex, and very costly. Dangerously simple little coats and frocks mass of intricate piecings strategically placed, with little or no embellishment seem to be prime favorites with les elegantes here, as well as with women on your side of the big trough.

The coat sketched for this page was seen at the Ritz recently and is a fine example of the coat now extant. It was of black madiana, the edges all around cut in toothed effect and stitched to prevent ravelling. The cape fits snugly over the shoulders and passes beneath shallow revers in front. Narrow turn-back cuffs have the tooth-edge finish.

Inset horizontal bands placed low on the coat, break the long straight line of the tube-like silhouette. We are inclined to think that this is a recent Chanel model, as it has all the characteristics of the current trend of this clever couturiere.

Rose-beige chiffon, combined with matching lace, of a very delicate pattern makes a most dainty evening frock from Louiseboulanger. The deep lace berths, opening at one side is bordered with tiveline. There is a soft chiffon flower on one shoulder. The raised waistline is shirred into an inner or concealed belt. The skirt touches the floor at sides and back, clearing the insteps in front.

STARS REVEAL OLLIE IS RASH AND DARING

By CATHERINE VICTORIA THOMPSON

We do not know the hour of birth of Garrett, but we noticed he has five out of nine planets in changeable signs, and, therefore, all through life he will have many changes and unusual experiences.

We have placed Capricorn, a political and rather cruel sign rising, so he should be ruled by Saturn placed in Libra, in the sign of his exaltation, in conjunction with the Sun in his mid-heaven, ruling his honor and business. This shows a great rise with an ultimate fall to disgrace or ignomy, and as this is just what has happened to him, we believe the hour of noon selected is correct.

Saturn is also in direct opposition to Mars, retrograding it, his proper sign of Aries, and this aspect alone, the ancients say, tends to make a man "liable to burns, falls, injuries or broken bones," and every seven years was dangerous for him since he was 21.

QUICK IN ANGER

The Sun is also in opposition to Mars, and this helps to make him rash, intrepid, firm, headstrong, determined, quick to anger, but generous. It sometimes causes a sudden or violent death, and if he was born at noon, the horoscope is dangerous, and more so if a little later, because Herschel will also be in this prominent house, in conjunction with Mercury, which affects the mind.

He was also born just before the Full Moon, and this shows difficulty in money matters, loss by speculation. It weakens the health and constitution and produces a long or serious illness.

He has a speculative nature, has always taken chances and would make a good gambler. Almost the very hour he was born, the Moon ruling him and the public was in exact good aspect to Neptune, a planet that rules the secret service, and matters kept quiet and stocks.

At this present time, the Moon by its secondary motion, is passing through Leo and is afflicting all Garrett's planets from fixed signs. The Moon was fixed the day he should have been in court and we do not believe he will be able to get far away from the right arm of the law. The Moon was opposing Venus and the Sun all day, when court was waiting for him to appear.

All this month, also, Saturn has been afflicting Garrett's radical Venus. His wife or a friend is ill and has been in great anxiety, and this will come up again the end of November, 1930.

MONEY INTERESTS

In July, 1930, Jupiter, who is so dignified and powerful in Garrett's horoscope and represents the money interests, enters Cancer and makes a good aspect to Garrett's progressed Saturn.

We also notice that Herschel, who rules automobiles and long journeys, is now resting on this Moon. He could be on his way to Canada or down South or some foreign place.

The day Garrett disappeared Mars, the god of war, accidents and violence, was in direct opposition to the subject's radical Herschel and Mercury, and it was plain he was going off on a long journey. He had friends who advised it, strange as this may seem.

Garrett is young and very resourceful, and may give the authorities a lot of thinking to do to keep up with him as his wits are unusually keen.

We do not know his hour of birth and are not sure that we will see him again so very often in Boston, as he is now in his natural element and should have resources hidden away where he can get hold of them when he needs them and friends as well to help him.

DELEGATES GET 6 DAYS PAY

Concord, N. H., June 26—The governor and council decided yesterday that the delegates to the recent constitutional convention should receive $5 per diem for the six days on which the convention actually was in session rather than for the 10 days which intervened between its assembling and final adjournment.

The finance committee of the convention reported a payroll which the convention adopted, calling for $30 for each delegate, but the attorney-general, queried by the State treasurer, said the delegates could draw pay for only six days. The governor and council, court of last resort as to the payment of bills from the State treasury, agreed with the attorney-general.

ADAMS SEEKS TO MODERNIZE WARSHIPS

Washington, June 26 (AP)—Adams today urged immediate authorization for modernizing three battleships as essential for the "reasonable effectiveness" of the fleet.

Before the House naval affairs committee, which is considering bills authorizing $30,000,000 for modernization of the Idaho, New Mexico and Mississippi, the naval secretary said the fleet would be "crippled" unless the gun ranges of the ships were increased.

After modernization, he said, the United States fleet would be "near" parity with that of Great Britain.

The changes would include elevation of guns, provision for additional protection from torpedo attacks and the installation of new boilers and more powerful engines.

Without the authorization for modernization, Adams said, labor forces at navy yards would be disrupted and between 3000 and 4000 men put out of work.

The secretary asserted "the London treaty has no bearing whatever" on the projected modernization.

LAUDS COURAGE OF WOMEN

The courage of the Puritan women is the first thing to be commemorated in any celebration of the tercentenary of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, Dr. Charles H. Bangs of Swampscott declared yesterday at the headquarters of the New England History Genealogical Society at 9 Ashburton pl.

"Almost equally important is the Puritans' recognition of the need of education," said Dr. Bangs, who was the fourth speaker in the series of 17 addresses arranged by the society as a tribute to the settlers of 1630, and to be given weekly all through the summer.

"The first system of free education should be commemorated and also the establishment inside of 10 years after their arrival on these shores of higher education, Harvard College and the Boston Latin school being the notable examples."

Representatives of the city, State and nation gathered at the University Club last night at a bachelor dinner in honor of Abraham S. Guterman, prominent Boston attorney, who will wed Miss Ada Poovru, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harris Poovru, on July 4.

Former Senator William M. Butler, former Asst. Atty.-Gen. George S. Fournin and many others connected with the State and national government occupied seats at the head table, at which Harry N. Guterman, brother of the prospective groom, was toastmaster.

The Guterman brothers have been associated in the law business in Boston for several years, and more than 300 members of the bar and men prominent in the public life of Boston gathered to pay tribute to the younger member of the law firm and to wish him every success in his married life.

It has been the policy of the national organization not to foster the competition of women's drill teams, but the Massachusetts branch, with several colorful drill teams, is especially interested in this phase of auxiliary activity.

AIRPORT BUSY FROM DAWN TO DARK

By GEORGE HAMBLIN

An average day on Boston Municipal Airport. What happens? Who flies? Where do they go and what do they do?

Many times we have heard these questions asked, and many times we have tried to answer them. Let us try and take you through a day's flying at the airport when the weather is good.

The night crews employed by the various commercial companies are just beginning to emerge from the depths of the hangars when the "early birds" arrive at the airport. Colonial Air Transport rolls out a Ford or Sikorsky, and the still morning air is shattered by the staccato barks of the engines as they are warmed up. Things start happening forthwith.

DAY IS STARTED

Eight o'clock, Colonial off for New York. Students reporting to offices of Curtiss-Wright and Skyways for instruction or solo flying. Ships appearing on the deadline as though by magic. Pilots take various places up for test flying, and the day's work is started. Eastern Air Express will leave at 8 when they resume service to Gotham.

Eighty-fifty and New England and Western Ford arrives from Springfield. Some new ship coming in—"Bud" Gray from Nantucket and Wareham. Five student ships now droning around the field, making landings.

Nine o'clock, N. E. W. Ford off for Springfield, Albany and New York. Student made tough landing that time—listen to instructor cuss him out—not using the helmet speaking tube. Nine-twenty-five, Curtiss-Wright Ford in from Nantucket, Vineyard and Hyannis. Special charter by Skyways to Montreal. Snow flying it.

SPEAKING OF UP

Ten-thirty, Colonial out to New York, and Consolidated Airways in from White River Junction Vt. Passenger from White River just makes Colonial. Ten-forty-five, Colonial in from New York; full load. Student out there soloing; wonder who he is. Backstrom checked him out.

Noon, and the day is half over. Time for lunch at Administration Building. Twelve-fifty p. m., N. E. W. in from New York, Albany and Springfield. One o'clock, Colonial out to New York. Fifteen minutes later N. W. takes off for Springfield and way stations. O'Toole reports full load.

ALL IN A DAY

Colonial in from New York at 2.15, and an hour later, Eastern Air Express will be in from Washington and New York, as soon as they resume flying. Four-thirty, Colonial out southbound. Fifteen minutes later and a Colonial Ford comes in, running like clock-work. New England and Western will be in at 4.55, and at 5 Curtiss-Wright leaves for the Cape. Consolidated leaves for White River, and at 5.30 N. E. W. hops off for Springfield. At 7.15, Colonial's last passenger ship of the day is in, with the air mail southbound.

Running through all this activity is a never ending stream of air planes using the field. The total number of landings made per day has never been computed, and it would be very difficult to do so. All this flying and nary a headache.

Come over to the airport any day and watch for yourself.

Police Boat Loses Race Against Death

The police boat Watchman lost a race with death by less than five minutes yesterday when Mrs. James Leonard of 17 Pond st., Dorchester, sought to reach her father, Frank W. Sears, who had suffered a sudden relapse at the Long Island Hospital.

Mrs. Leonard and her husband tried to hire a tug without success after missing the hospital's boat. They were about to give up when someone suggested the police boat. When Capt. Rosa A. Perry, the harbor master, heard the story, he assigned the Watchman to make the dash from Constitution wharf to Long Island.

Sears died when the boat was within a few feet of the pier at Long Island, according to physicians at the hospital.

Mother Wants to Know About Explosive Laws

Editor Boston American:

As a mother who has lately come to live in your city I wish to inquire about the law regarding safeguarding children from the danger of injury during Fourth of July celebrations.

It seems to me that too much care cannot be exercised to protect children from the dangers of explosives used in some of the large firecrackers and torpedoes that were used by the hundreds for the last celebration (June 17). What one child sees another do he wants to do also and when children play with dynamite the risk is great.

Is there a law in Boston regulating the use of firecrackers? And are there laws against importing of illegally sized explosives into the city?

Says People Should Urge Congress on Pensions

Editor Boston American:

The American public owes a duty to the wounded and disabled defenders of the country during the recent World War to write and wire their local Representatives and Senators in Congress to pass the pending Disabled Veterans' Bill over the President's veto, as he has predicted.

The Nation, the same as an individual, is not at all unselfish. It is very jealous of its Constitution, its government and its traditions. Without soldiers and sailors to defend the country in time of war, it would be a physical impossibility for any civilized country to exist.

Without our soldiers and sailors, our country, the same as any other on the face of the earth, would be and must eventually pass out of existence.

We owe it to ourselves and posterity to spread a patriotic example to the young children at present in their teens, growing up to manhood and womanhood. America will depend a great deal in the future upon the children of yesterday and today. A country does not live but for one generation has hopes and aspirations of carrying on indefinitely.

In case of another national crisis, which we hope will never come, it would be well to have our citizens and their children feel that this most grateful nation will amply provide for its disabled who are willing to offer their lives on the field of battle in defense of their country.

We, as Americans, are not hoping for war. But if war ever comes the protection and preservation of our home will require millions of men. We must always satisfy our citizens; we must let them know that they are part of the greatest nation on earth; we must convey to them the message that this is their country, and that America has always lived up to its obligations with 100 per cent measure.

In the final analysis, the nation itself will be the gainer, for a dissatisfied people is more deadly and destructive than poison gas. A satisfied people is willing to give not only their lives but their resources, their money, for the common purpose of defense. Yes, and the mother without hesitation will give her sons, and the young wife her husband, and she will even go out to work to maintain herself during this crisis.

But a dissatisfied people, on the other hand, is a burden upon the shoulders of the government. Even vast armies and vast navies with the largest battleships will not prevent them from spreading the weapon of propaganda which eventually must terminate in destruction, devastation and ruin. We must ever remember the example that we learned from some of the most modern countries of the world that are today but a matter of ancient history.

LOUIS ARBONSON,
Commander All-Dorchester Post, 154, American Legion.

Wants to Know Why "Keep Off Grass"

Editor Boston American:

As a visitor to Boston, I am curious to know what they are "saving the grass" in the Public Garden for? I took the liberty of sitting down there the other day, to enjoy the beautiful scenery and the boating on the lake. Almost immediately, I was ordered off by a policeman, just as if I were a tramp. I asked him why we were not permitted to sit on the grass, and was told the grass was being saved on account of the Tercentenary celebration. I told him I was a Tercentenary visitor and that it was all right to permit me to sit on the grass. But out I went, along with a dozen or so other visitors, and all of us rather chilled by Boston's welcome.

Incidentally, we love children, but we were startled to say the least, by the dressing and undressing, openly, right on the sidewalks near the pond in the park. Of course, none of us is to be shocked by the sight of naked boys and girls running about, but this sight right in the heart of a big city, and right in the heart of a more aged such as the common naturally gave us a start. And Boston bars books, too!

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

Editor Boston American:

I am a Boston business man, holding, if I may say so, a fairly responsible position. It so happens that I am called upon at this time to interview a number of applicants for positions that may lead to responsible berths in our organization. Quite the majority of the applicants are college graduates.

While this is by no means a new thought, I may say that I am impressed, almost beyond expression, with the absolute unworldliness of these adults.

Now I realize that their ears are still ringing with the laudatory bromides of commencement, but why is it necessary to unloose them on a business world when the majority have absolutely no idea what it's all about?

Can't the colleges take some of the time spent on fancy optional subjects in the latter half of the senior year and apply that same time to grounding men in the essentials of common sense?

I do not expect, nor does any reasonable person, that graduates will have the experience of men long in business. But it is not unreasonable to suppose that they will learn their first question should not be:

"How much pay?" Now, the second: "What hours do I work?"

It seems to me that these young men are more concerned with avoiding work than getting it. I have a long list of indictments, but will defer to someone who will answer these problems.

Favors Proposed New Charles St. Station

Editor Boston American:

I was very glad to notice in your letter column reference to the placing of a subway station at the junction of Charles and Cambridge sts.

This would be a great convenience to thousands who have to visit the Massachusetts General Hospital, especially the Eye and Ear Infirmary in that locality. There are other places pleading for this consideration.

There was a big howl when the Arlington st. station was omitted. Merchants howled the loudest, and got it.

The poor aged infirm, as well as others, especially many of the workers in these institutions, would welcome that station.

If Governor Allen would only consider what this subway station means to so many, he would not blue pencil it. The bus does not cover the problem. Let the Governor ride in the bus to justify his decision.

Jarring Named as Cause of Street Car Sickness

Editor Boston American:

Car sickness which some people suffer while riding in electric cars does not result from riders looking out of windows, as has been popularly believed.

This has now been confirmed in Boston.

Dr. James E. Lebensohn of Northwestern University, who has given much study to this type of sickness, states the illness is caused by the disturbance of the labyrinth of the ear due largely to jarring of the car.

There was said in your letter column lately something about the noise in the subway (not the Cambridge subway) about the banging and grinding noises as cars enter a station.

This affects the ears and may cause dizziness or nausea.

Wants to Know About Late Sleepers

Editor Boston American:

Dr. Donald A. Laird of Colgate University has branched out into queer investigations. He is studying the sleeping habits of men and women. I am very glad to run across this sort of information in your paper. At the dinner table of my home the other evening we were talking about the same matter.

Why is it that the average woman likes to stay in bed longer than the average man? Why is it harder for a man to get to sleep when he tumbles into bed than for a woman who is snoring before he can say "Jack Robinson"?

These are queer questions. Some have concluded that the average woman hates to rise mornings at a reasonable hour. Maids in homes catch the same habit from their mistresses.

I know of a husband who has to yell the air out of his lungs nearly every morning to get the hired girl up to get breakfast. He takes his breathing exercises in this way daily. Then upon the top of this I saw in the paper about married women spending lazy three days. They trust too much to mechanical inventions in the modern kitchen to get breakfast ready in five minutes.

Then over in Cambridge there is a psychologist who lately declared that a certain amount of laziness may count favorably towards high achievement. Can you beat it?

Differs on Statistics of Dish Washing

Editor Boston American:

Did you ever wash dishes? Do you like it? Did you ever find a living being who with his hands across his heart could say: "I love to wash dishes," and really believe him?

There is no such animal with that mind.

Then here is Miss K. Heiner and another person of the University of Chicago, bending information to Boston which is the bunk of all information, that it takes 34 minutes and eight seconds to handle dirty dishes and make them clean.

To me that time is away off. I never in my life got through this drudgery under an hour or more.

I have cudgelled my brains how this expert woman ever found out these facts. Then she adds that it takes 1954 motions in the wiping and washing of dirty dishe

But then they say that John Mansfield Frost Lawrence of England once washed dishes in a bar room in New York city. This acting would never make a pond out of me. You can bet on that.

Glad "El" Gets Credit for Good Deeds

Editor Boston American:

I was glad to see you give credit where credit is due regarding the Boston Elevated's safety campaign.

It looks to me that the Elevated is pleasing its patrons also in giving them a whole train for smoking in early morning and late afternoon hours, while New York's elevated prohibits it.

RUSSELL TELLS OF POOL WITH LINGLE

Chicago, June 26 (CS)—The financial operations of Alfred "Jake" Lingle, murdered Chicago Tribune reporter, were revealed yesterday.

An outstanding development was the admission by former Police Commissioner W. F. Russell that he and Lingle maintained a joint stock market account which at one time represented a $100,000 pool.

LOST HEAVILY

This was said to have been wiped out during the stock market crash of last fall.

Information indicates that other influential persons were led into the stock market with Lingle and it is believed that they would know of the secret friendships and enmities which the slain reporter had.

All the new facts learned yesterday will be presented soon to the grand jury which is to take up the Lingle investigation.

Russell made the disclosure of his and Lingle's financial deals at a conference to which he was summoned by Patrick Roche, chief investigator for State's Atty. John A. Swanson, and Charles F. Rathbun, Swanson's special assistant in the Lingle investigation.

CAPTAINS QUESTIONED

Several police captains known to have been on friendly terms with Lingle and to have been acquainted with some of his operations were also called.

Two men connected with a racing paper, in which Lingle is reported to have owned a half interest, also were questioned.

In a complete check of Lingle's banking transactions, it was learned that he frequently deposited large sums, although he was working as a reporter on a moderate salary.

Russell denied, under questioning, that he had any other desk with Lingle and asserted they were only friends and "played the market" together.

ZANTRE SLIDES DOWN WAYS

Kennebunkport, Me., June 26—The cabin cruiser Zantre owned by Booth Tarkington, one of the place's most noted summer residents was launched here yesterday.

There were many guests and the whole village was on hand to see the yacht slide down the ways. Mrs. Tarkington crashed a bottle over the bow.

RYDER HANDLED MILLIONS AND GOT NO FEE

New York, June 26 (US)—Harold Russell Ryder was epitomized yesterday by Frank Bailey, very wealthy chairman of the Prudence Co., as "a very generous man who liked to do nice things."

Bailey had abundant reason so to estimate the broker and night club patron, whose firm, Woody & Co., failed last week. For Ryder did $10,000,000 worth of trading for Bailey since July, 1928. And never, said Bailey under oath, did Ryder draw down one penny in commission. Indeed, it was sufficient compensation for Ryder, said Bailey, that he was conferring a favor on Bailey in acting as his trader.

GAVE COLLEGE $300,000

The unusual situation between broker and client was revealed in Referee Henry K. Davis' hearing into the bankruptcy which, investigators allege, involves and abuts on transactions aggregating between $5,000,000 and $8,000,000 in losses.

Bailey, sometimes irked by pressing queries, tossed into the record a remarkable story of how he had permitted Ryder to use his, Bailey's stock profits, to give $300,000 to Union College in Ryder's name, because Bailey desired to flatter Ryder into making further profits for the benefit of Union College.

LOST $2,500,000

He related a series of transactions which eventually meant for Bailey a loss of $2,000,000 through Ryder and of half a million by Max Bailey. He admitted taking Ryder to task for failure to deliver securities, yet entrusting him thereafter with a further $709,112 in stocks.

Ryder, who is on $10,000 bail on charges of grand larceny and receiving stolen goods, is to be called to the stand today to deliver his version of his financial relations with Bailey.

LEADS IN FIGHT FOR HUB PORT

Corporation Counsel Samuel Silverman is in Newark, N. J., to lead the fight for Boston in its attempt to obtain a more favorable freight differential rate from the Interstate Commerce Commission for the purpose of boosting this port.

Tomorrow's appeal will be heard with the New Jersey cases, as both seek a rate below that allowed at the port of New York.

Corporation Counsel Silverman explained that New York's port facilities have already been overburdened, and pointed out that a lower freight rate here would send much of the excess shipping to Boston.

THE WAYSIDE INN, SUDBURY

"A kind of old Hobgoblin Hall
With weather stains upon the wall,
And stairways worn, and crazy doors,

Such an old tavern stood in Sudbury, on the Post road from Boston to New York, in the days when "half effaced by rain and shine, the Red Horse pranced on the sign."

Immortalized in Longfellow's Tales of a Wayside Inn, the once bustling inn has now become a show-spot, where visitors from the world over arrive eagerly. It still offers hospitality in a splendid cuisine, but the prices are somewhat different than in the old days when a "good dinner" could be had for a quarter, or thereabouts.

The Red Horse Tavern, owned by several generations of Howes, was a typical "ordinary" of a bustling large-sized town. The landlord, Howe was a man of note and the political destiny of the county was oft discussed for the tavern was a rendezvous for the town.

GOOD PHLIPS

Here, the arrival of the mail coach, with a flourish, to the tavern was an event of thrilling importance, while the tap room was ever popular for its good "phlip." In this tap room many famous men have gathered. John Hancock, Daniel Webster and the famous bard, Longfellow, who has made the rambling old structure a setting for his famous Tales, which every school boy and girl knows by heart.

Much could be said of the Howes, who, upon losing their wealth, undertook the venture of a public house, and how from father to son the old "ordinary" passed through the years until Longfellow's day.

John How was the first of the Howes (the "e" was added later), to move to these shores, and he became a tavern keeper as early as 1661. He was a statesman and a justice of the peace, "a man of character," indeed.

But the John How was not of Red Horse Tavern, but in a neighboring town he disposed a Hark Hide upon his sign. He was, however, the first Landlord How.

David How opened the Red Horse Tavern shortly after 1711 in a small house which is supposed to be the "ell" in the rear of the present establishment. His son, Ezekiel enlarged the inn because of the larger demand for accommodation.

Ezekiel How took part in the opening battle at Lexington. George Washington honored the inn by his presence in 1789, when he made a farewell tour of New England.

COLONIAL REMINDER

Colonel How's third son, Adam, became possessor at his father's death and he kept the inn until 1830, when his son, Lyman, carried on the business.

Lyman Howe was a bachelor, so the line of Howes ended at his decease. In his time the Red Horse was again as unpretentious as at its beginning, for the railroad has usurped the stream of guests which used to arrive by stage coach.

The Wayside Inn is now a glorious reminder of colonial days, with a splendid collection of antiques which the present owner, Henry Ford, has collected carefully. The surroundings are beautiful and well protected. Visitors are welcome.

WIFE SLAYER FOUND INSANE

New Bedford, June 26—Albert LaPlante, 41, former bus driver, was acquitted yesterday in Superior Court here of the charge of murdering his wife and was sent for life to the Bridgewater State Hospital for the Criminal Insane.

He was accused of firing six shots from a revolver into his wife's body on May 24, after an argument over financial affairs.

The shooting occurred in the garden of the home, Judge Fred L. Swift W. Feslick was told by the alienists in court here that LaPlante had been insane for at least two years, probably a recurrence of a mental illness caused when he was hit on the head with a baseball bat when he was a boy.

Fear for Safety of Missing Girl

She did not report for duty.

Late that night she was seen, the police have learned, in a red automobile bearing a Massachusetts number plate, in company of two young men.

HOOVER AGREES TO MEXICO TOUR

By WILLIAM P. FLYTHE
Universal Service

Washington, June 26—President Hoover has tentatively accepted the invitation of Dwight W. Morrow, ambassador to Mexico, that the Mexican government to visit that country during August.

This was strongly indicated after the ambassador and Republican senatorial nominee from New Jersey held a long conference with the President yesterday.

"I strongly urged President Hoover to visit Mexico while I am there and I believe that he will do so," Ambassador Morrow stated. "He plans to make a trip during August which will bring him to the Mexican border and I believe that it would go a long way to cement our good relations if he would visit that country. I know that he wished to do so and has only postponed his visit because of the press of business."

Smithy Tells of Horrors She Sees

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

One convoy of wounded after another is the lot of the women's ambulance corps of which Helen Smith is a member. Commandant whom Tosh has christened "Mrs. Itch," is a hard task-master. Strenuous work, little sleep and poor food show on the girls. When Smithy's mother writes praising her silly war views, "Smithy," picturing the war-ravaged men, revolts. But letters from her war-nurse sister, Trix, are treate Deaths are numerous and heart-rending.

CHAPTER 14

See the stretcher-bearers lifting the trays one by one, slotting them deftly into my ambulance.

Out of the way, quickly, Mother and Mrs. Evans-Mawnington, lift your silken skirts aside, a man is spewing blood, the moving has upset him, finished him—he will die on the way to hospital if he doesn't die before the ambulance is loaded. I know.

All this is old history to me. Sorry this has happened. It isn't pretty to see a hero spewing up his life's blood in public, is it?

Much more romantic to see him in the picture papers being awarded the V. C. even if he is minus a limb or two. A most unfortunate occurrence.

That man strapped down? That raving, blaspheming creature screaming filthy words you don't know the meaning of—words your daughter uses in every day conversation, a habit she has contracted from vulgar contact of this kind—oh, merely gone mad, Mother and Mrs. Evans-Mawnington.

Shell-Shock
Acts Like Jumping Jack

He may have seen a headless body running on and on with blood spurting from the trunk—the crackle of the frost-stiff, dead men packing the duck-boards water-tight may have gradually undermined his reason—there are many things the sitters tell me on our long night rides that could have done this.

No, not any shock. The shell-shock cases take it more quietly as a rule, unless they are suddenly startled. Let me find you an example.

Ah, the man they are bringing out now, the one staring straight ahead at nothing — twitching, twitching, twitching, each limb working in a different direction, like a Jumping Jack worked by a jerking string—look at him, both of you; bloody awful, isn't it, Mother and Mrs. Evans-Mawnington?

That's shell-shock. If you dropped your handbag on the platform he would start to rave as madly as the other.

What? You won't try the experiment? You can't watch him? Why not? Why not? I have to every night, why the hell can't you do it for once, damn your eyes?

Hold Him Over
Not So Badly Off

Forgive me, Mother and Mrs. Evans-Mawnington, that I was not the kind of language a nicely-brought up young lady from Wimbledon Common uses. I forgot myself. We will begin again.

See the man they are fitting into the bottom slot? He is coughing badly. No, not pneumonia. Not tuberculosis. Nothing so picturesque. Gently, gently, stretcher-bearers, he is about done. Only his lungs, Mother and Mrs. Evans-Mawnington.

He is coughing well tonight. That is gas. You've heard of gas, haven't you? It burns and shrivels the lungs to—to the mess you see on the ambulance floor there. He's about the age of Bertie, Mother. Not unlike Bertie, either, with his gentle brown eyes and fair, curly hair.

Bertie would look up pleadingly like that in between coughing up his lungs, the son you are so eager to send out to the trenches before Roy Evans-Mawnington in case Mrs. Evans-Mawnington scores over you at the next recruiting meeting.

"I have given my only son—"

TWO WOMEN ASSISTED TO SAFETY

Somerville Man Taken to the Hospital After Rescue of Other Tenants

One man was overcome by smoke and another collapsed from shock as the result of a fire in the 12-apartment block at 56-58 Pinckney st., East Somerville, early today.

A score of men, women and children, tenants of the building, were forced to flee in scanty clothing when flames reached the first floor from the basement and rolled up through the three floors.

John W Lolie, a tenant, collapsed on the sidewalk after assisting Mrs. Eleanor McKay and Mrs. Julia Bela, also tenants, to safety. He was taken to Central Hospital.

A short time after the fire was out, George E. Allen, another tenant, collapsed from excitement and shock. He was sent to the same hospital.

The fire started in a rubbish pile in the basement and worked up into the ground floor of the building, in which nine suites are occupied.

Mrs. Virginia Keglay, occupant of a second-floor apartment, smelled smoke, and her screams awoke James Tilley. He gave the alarm throughout the building. Damage to the building was set at $1500.

Brookline Fire Drives Thirty to Street

Dense smoke pouring from the burning upper stories of the building at 107-109 West Brookline st., South End forced 30 people, living above by, to flee their homes last night.

Gaining a start shortly after 10 o'clock in the storage rooms of the United Furniture Company, the fire was burning so briskly in the three upper floors of the five-story building when Deputy Chief William F. Quigley arrived that he ordered a second alarm.

Residents of a six-family house on one side, of a two-family house on the other side, and of the building on Trumbull st., directly in the rear, fled, but they were soon able to return.

The first two floors of the building are occupied by the Eastern Smelting and Refining Company, which sustained some water damage. The total damage was estimated by Deputy Chief Quigley at $12,000. The cause was not determined.

About three years ago this build ng was the scene of a serious two-alarm blaze.

W. S. M'NARY, 68, IS DEAD IN BOSTON

Former Congressman, Long a Political Leader, Suffered a Pneumonia Attack

Death resulted from pneumonia and heart disease, a combination with which his physique, rugged even in his 68th year, could not cope. He had been a patient at the hospital but a short time.

Although long a resident of South Boston, from which district he was sent to Congress McNary's home in recent years had been at 84 College ave., Newton.

Born at Abington, March 29, 1863, he embarked upon a brilliant public career that included service in the Boston City Council, in the State Legislature, as Boston water commissioner and director of the port and as Congressman from the 10th Massachusetts district for two terms.

He was a former secretary and chairman of the Democratic state committee and a delegate to three Democratic national conventions.

As a student in the public schools he won the Franklin medal of honor at Boston English high and later took special courses in languages, literature and law.

He engaged in newspaper work as a reporter and was managing editor of the Boston Commercial Bulletin for many years.

In June, 1892, he was married to Albertine A. Martin. Two children, Helen and William S., Jr., were born to them.

In the old 9th Massachusetts Regiment he served both in the ranks and as an officer.

WAS PORT DIRECTOR

He was a member of the old common council in 1888 and 1887 and served in the House of Representatives in 1888 and 1889. He was a member of the State Senate two years, starting in 1890.

He was appointed water commissioner by Mayor Matthews in 1893, serving two years, and later served as chairman of the Massachusetts Harbor and Land Commission and as a director of the port of Boston.

From 1903 to 1907 he was a member of the 58th and 59th congresses, retiring in 1907 to enter business as a member of the firm of Drake & Hersey Co.

His most active service to the Democratic state committee covered the years from 1898 to 1904. He was a delegate at the national conventions in 1892, 1900 and 1904.

IN BITTER CONTROVERSY

He made a legion of friends and not a few political enemies. His controversy with former Mayor John F Fitzgerald before the latter's election was a bitter one.

Few men shared a larger social acquaintance than he. He was a man of great serlfath of character, affable and generous and an able and eloquent orator.

Crippled Hero and His Prize

WHEN A DOG chased this homeless waif of a kitten into a sewer in Brighton today, the world looked black—all nine lives were on the brink whence cats' lives go, and the kitten was struggling in the murky waters. Then in a flash there came succor. John Lehan, a little crippled boy—but long on valor—had witnessed the catastrophe to the cat and without a thought to his own safety he plunged in and dragged out the kitten, shooed away the dog, and here they are, rather bedraggled, but hale and friendly. (Staff photo.)

Crippled Boy Saves Kitten From Death in Sewer

A heroic crippled boy and a frightened homeless kitten today gave the Morris ave section of Brighton one of the biggest heart throbs it ever had.

One of the first friends the little grey cat made when she arrived in the neighborhood a few weeks ago, where she has become a neighborhood pet, was John Lehan, 15, of 9 Morris ave, who is crippled in both legs.

While the kitten was struggling for life in the sewer water, John took off the cover and lowered himself into the water, finally getting the kitten to safety.

Purring in contentment, the kitten lay in the arms of her rescuer, wet and bedraggled but rubbing her head lovingly against the arm of John.

The boy is the son of John J. Lehan, prominent business man, and lives with his father and mother. He is a pupil at St Columbkille's parochial school.

Mrs. E. Boylston of Leesburg Fla., had a bit of bad luck today at the Statler Hotel, which speedily turned into good luck.

Frank La Page of 24 Highland ave., Somerville, a driver for the Beacon Hill Taxi Co., felt something strike him on the shoulder as he stood on the sidewalk below. He stooped and picked up a diamond ring.

While he was still looking at it in amazement, Harold Hanson, night manager of the hotel, rushed out and began looking around on the sidewalk. La Page asked if he had lost anything. Hanson and a woman had dropped a diamond ring.

CONRY HEARS BUSINESS MEN ON TRAFFIC

Conference Fails to Agree on Many Proposals; Meets Again in Fortnight

Suggestions for several new one-way streets, new parking restrictions and the levying of a city fee on trucks standing in the downtown area were discussed today before Traffic Commissioner Joseph A. Conry by representatives of business firms and organizations interested.

There appeared no unanimity of opinion on any proposal save that to enforce the present law denying trucks the use of Beacon st., from Kenmore sq. to Massachusetts ave. For the better enforcement of that law more patrolmen will be specially detailed.

The hearing was continued for two weeks and in the meantime proponents and opponents of the several proposals will try to reach an understanding.

HULTMAN WARNS OF COST

One of the most interesting suggestions was that for the city to tax at $1 each all trucks that stand for any length of time in a certain area. Day Baker, representing truck agencies, discussed the idea, which found no opposition from Capt. Bernard J. Hoppe, police traffic official.

Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman, who was present, said it would be a good idea to investigate to determine whether it would not cost the city about $20 to collect each $1.

E. Mark Sullivan, former correspondent, representing several Back Bay hotels, declared there was considerable laxity in enforcing the Beacon st. truck law and this seemed to be generally admitted, with the result that Capt. Mosher of the Back Bay division was instructed to assign two policemen to take the names of all drivers who are violators.

One group in attendance favored making Essex and Boylston sts. one way for their entire length and South and Lincoln sts. one way from Summer to Kneeland. Representing the Jordan Marsh Co., Thomas F. Lockney protested the inconvenience that would result to shoppers, particularly those using the Shoppers' Garage.

ASKS PARKING BAN.

The New England Shoe & Leather Association, which is represented throughout the district involved by the proposal asked for an opportunity to discuss any plans for Beacon st. before they are adopted. This meeting will be one of a series, state Asst Traffic Commissioner John F. Hurley.

Because trucks speed down the grade of Cass st., Hyde Park, endangering the lives of children attending school in the district, Rev. M. J. Houlihan, pastor of the Church of the Most Precious Blood, asked that it be made one way.

City Councilor John L. Fitzgerald asked for a rule prohibiting all parking in Lynn st., West End. The street is too narrow, he said.

A petition was presented in opposition to the plan to make Central st., from Atlantic ave., to Kilby, one way.

Residents of Maple st., West Roxbury, protested the increased use of their street by trucks which cause an high speed and seriously endanger children.

Daniel Bloomfield of the retail trade board of the Chamber of Commerce asked for time to study the proposed changes, and will make known the chamber's attitude at the next meeting.

Four Punished for Boy Bandit's Escape

Thirty-day suspension of a patrolman and public reprimand of three officers for negligence was ordered by Police Commissioner Hultman today following his inquiry into the escape of Victor Stanwhite, 17-year-old bandit, from the city prison Saturday night.

Patrolman Joseph W. Walsh of division 2, from whose sleeping person Stanwhite stole keys to open his cell, was suspended for 30 days without pay, starting tonight.

Lieut. William H. Allen and Sergt. John C. E. Clark and Edmund R. English will be reprimanded in general orders at 3:30 call tonight. They are all on duty at the prison.

Clark was negligent in giving the keys to Walsh and both Walsh and Clark were lax in leaving gates open, Hultman decided. Although Lieut. Allen was not on duty the night of the escape, he was lax in that he failed to report to Commissioner Hultman that conditions at the prison needed changing.

Pointing out that Lieut. Allen claimed he had made such a report to former Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson, Hultman warned that in the future no member of the department need expect leniency on the basis of any report he may have made to any former police commissioner.

A 17-year-old boy who claimed he was Ernest J. Granville, of Billerica, was still being held by the police of Lancaster, N. H., today on the suspicion that he is Stanwhite. Lancaster authorities are awaiting the arrival of fingerprints of Stanwhite from Lisbon. Their comparison is expected upon the fatal escape of the second man at the base of the move where Stanwhite has one.

BENTLEY, HELD AS AUTO THIEF, IS INDICTED

Called into special session by Dist. Atty. Bushnell, the Middlesex County grand jury today indicted on three counts Benjamin G. Bentley, 26, of Medford who was arrested by state police yesterday in their probe of an alleged auto theft ring.

Bentley's capture followed a search of a house in South Medford where a woman who is alleged to have been friendly with Oliver Garrett and who is reported to have been seen with him shortly before he took to flight, made her home. A small arsenal was found in the house.

Bentley was indicted for carrying weapons, four guns and a blackjack for having burglar tools and for receiving a stolen automobile. He was in the auto when arrested and the four guns were allegedly found in the car. Bentley was already in custody, having been held yesterday in bail of $20,000.

Secret indictments were returned in connection with the attack on Miss Catherine Haggerty, church organist and telephone operator, at Concord last Sunday.

Armed with an indictment warrant, State Officer O'Neil and Concord policemen later went to a house on Forks st., Waltham, and arrested Leonard J. Hennessey, 23. It is understood others were named by the grand jury in the same connection. The charge is attack with criminal intent. Miss Haggerty is still at Concord Hospital and her condition is serious.

Nick Mazzo, 48, of Gore st., Cambridge, was indicted for first degree murder in the death of his stepson, Carmine D. Amelio, 35, who was found dead last Friday stabbed through the heart.

This Game Called Golf!

Girl, Beginner at Golf, Has Eye on Title

Out on the Franklin Park municipal golf course Peggy Keane, 18, of Hutchins st., Dorchester, is still regarded as just a beginner at golf.

But like a boy who comes from the sand lot and makes good in the big leagues as a baseball player so may Peggy some day step off of Franklin Park and enter herself as a contestant for national amateur honors.

If in two or three years Peggy does that Glenna Collet or whoever else may be the champion by that time will have to be careful.

SEES PROSPECTS

Early in April Mrs. Helga Keane, mother of Peggy, and considered an expert of the game decided that her daughter might some day, if carefully trained, become another Glenna Collett.

So she took Peggy to Franklin Park and began to show the girl how it is done. Today Peggy has brought her score down to an average of 92 which is not bad at all. And it seems as though each day the average is lower.

Now Mrs. Keane always manages to finish the course at about 80, never over 82. To show her daughter and to continue to improve the girl, Mrs. Keane takes the girl to Franklin Park every day excepting Sunday and around they go over the full 18-hole course.

REGULAR LIFE

Mrs. Keane declares that to be a good golfer one must lead a regular life and take daily exercises and also take part in other athletics.

To do this Mrs. Keane and her daughter rise at 7 a. m. daily, eat a light breakfast and at 9 o'clock in the morning they are in swimming. An hour before noon they return home to rest and then eat a light lunch consisting of crackers and milk.

Then they go to Franklin Park for their private tourney and then back to supper which is served promptly at 6 p. m. Three hours later they are in bed and off to sleep so as to be fit for the next day.

WOMAN HELD IN THREAT CASE COLLAPSES

Judge Orders "Poison Pen" Defendant Sent to Hospital for Observation

With a woman and a boy appearing in the West Roxbury District Court today, and another woman as a complainant, police of West Roxbury station believe they have reached the solution of the poison pen letter writer and phantom stone thrower that has had the Washington st. section of Roslindale aroused for days.

Mrs. Annie Nowland, 52, of Washington st., Roslindale, charged in a number of counts with uttering menaces, making threats and injuring property, was sent to the Psychopathic Hospital for observation by Judge John Perrin.

Harland Chrestensen, 13, of 582 Couth st., a newsboy, before court charged with making threats, has his case continued. Mrs. Catherine Mannell, of 2049 Washington st. complained that she was the victim of menaces and threats.

As Mrs. Rowland entered the courtroom this morning walking on a cane she broke down and partially collapsed. Complainants are Misses Annabelle Carr, 26, and Mary R. Farrandino, 21, both of 4113 Washington st., Roslindale.

The case is the outcome of the leaving of letters and notes at the front and rear doors of the home of the Farrandino and Carr families, with rocks being hurled in there at various times, since last August.

START SOON ON L ST. SPAN

Work on the reconstruction of the L st. bridge, recently swept by fire, will be started in three weeks, Mayor Curley announced last night following a conference with Public Works Commissioner Joseph A. Rourke and Chairman Thomas J. Hurley of the street commission.

His two cabinet members stated they would advertise for contractors to bid on the job without delay and, under the law, two weeks must be given to the contractors to study the specifications and make up their bids.

Though Councilor Michael J. Mahoney of South Boston secured passage by the City Council of an order demanding a two-lane draw span, the mayor stated that it would be impossible as a year and a half would be required to build a span of that width, while the planned bridge could be finished in less than a year.

The approaches to the bridge will be new and wider. The draw itself will be 60 feet, but will be a reconstructed one. The old span will be used.

Salem Police Keep After Gypsy Band

Salem police today will attempt to evict a band of 50 gypsies encamped since yesterday afternoon in a vacant lot on Barnes rd. near the Lynn line.

When the band arrived they were told to move but displayed what purported to be a week's lease of the property. The leader declared that he had rented the land from an aged recluse and refused to get out.

Salem Police Halt Snow Battle as Mercury Soars

They say they were called to Town House sq. today to suppress a serious "snowball war" which had broken out among a group of boys all of whom seemed to have poor aim.

When a Salem market defrosted its refrigeration system several truck loads of snow was cast out to the rear of the building. A few minutes later the boys were having the snowball fight and pedestrians had been pressed so hard police assistance was summoned.

Men! Wear Earrings And You Get Cooler

What do you think of men wearing earrings?

And if earrings why not nose rings to match?

Omigosh!

Police headquarters—We would arrest a man wearing earrings on the streets of Boston as a public menace. He'd be crazy.

Museum of Fine Arts—If we saw a man wearing earrings we would think he was an Indian or crazy.

Department of Mental Diseases—It is all right for men to wear earrings in the states along the Mexican border and in Europe. But in this State he would be arrested as insane or feebleminded although he may not be.

DEB FAVORS STYLE

Debutante—They might look a lot more romantic than most of them do now at that. Why not earrings for men and a nose ring, too, by which the girls could lead 'em around?

Wrestling Champion—Say, are you stringing me? Earrings, huh? Take 'em away to the psychopathic ward.

FOR JINGLE KIND

Corporation Counsel Samuel Silverman—No respectable lawyer would defend a man wearing earrings until he first had his client examined for his sanity. We could stamp this fad out pronto in winter, with a few good, hard snowballs but in summer, when it's too hot to wrestle, the only way that I see to chuck 'em into the psychopathic ward.

Washington st. jeweler—Let the men wear earrings if they want, but don't spoil the ensemble by leaving off the nose ring to match. We shall stock up with the kind that jingle when a man shakes his head.

Judge of the divorce court—Haven't we got enough troubles already? The weather is too warm for increasing the divorce docket, which would get all those that escaped the psychopathic ward. The women wouldn't stand for men wearing earrings.

What chance has a man got to create styles of his own after a poll like this?

PEARY'S WIDOW LAUDS BYRD

Mrs. Robert E. Peary, widow of Admiral Peary, discoverer of the North Pole, passed through Boston today en route to her summer home at Cape Bay Me. She was accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. Edward Stafford Rowland, who was called "the snow baby" because she was born in the Arctic regions.

"I am sorry not to be able to remain over for the reception to Admiral Byrd tomorrow," Mrs. Peary said as she climbed into the automobile in which she is traveling directly after lunch at the Hotel Lenox.

"But I was privileged to greet Admiral Byrd in Washington.

"He is one of the most generous and lovable young men it has been my privilege to meet. Very few men, at the moment of attaining their life's ambition, would pause to remember the pioneers who blazed the trail for their success.

"This Admiral Byrd did both at the North Pole two years ago when he paused over the pole to salute the memory of my husband and when he flew over the South Pole where he dropped the American flag wrapped around a stone from the grave of his pilot, Floyd Bennett.

"This is Commander Byrd's home-coming. Why feature the widow of another? He deserves all the homage possible."

Mrs. Peary received a special invitation from Mayor Curley to attend the city's reception to Commander Byrd tomorrow. However she left for Billerica to meet her two grandsons.

He was also charged with assault on Patrolman Charles F. Lacey of the Somerville police, who was attracted to Somerville beach by the screams of the girl.

CAPTAIN AND CREW OF 8 OFF HUB SCHOONER RESCUED AT SEA

FOUND ADRIFT NORTH OF BERMUDA

Boston Owners Believe Cargo of Coal Shifted, Necessitating the Desertion of Boat

After abandoning their vessel at sea, the captain and crew of eight of the four-masted schooner Mary G. Maynard, owned by Crowell & Thurlow of Boston, were picked up today by the Norwegian motorship Evina.

News of their plight and rescue reached the owners in a radio message from the Evina

The cause of leaving the ship was not given but it is believed the cargo of 100 tons of coal, which the vessel was carrying from New York to Bermuda, shifted in stormy weather.

The Evina reported picking up the men at 38 degrees north latitude and 66 west longitude, a position due north of Bermuda and possibly indicating the schooner had been blown far off its course.

How long the men were in the lifeboat is not known. The Evina is bound from Tampico to England and the survivors of the Mary G. Maynard will have to make the voyage there.

The Mary G Maynard is valued by the owners at $30,000, and the company reported it was not insured. The vessel was built at Boothbay harbor in 1920 and was 184 feet long, with 36-foot beam and gross tonnage of 735.

SOJOURNERS TO GATHER IN HUB

The National Sojourners, a patriotic and social organization composed of commissioned officers past and present of the uniformed forces of the United States, who are Masons, have selected Boston for their 1931 convention. The announcement was made today by the convention bureau of Boston Chamber of Commerce. They will convene here next June for their 11th annual meeting.

Chapters are located in all parts of the world wherever American forces are stationed, comprising a membership of more than 20,000.

In New England there are chapters in Boston, Worcester, Springfield, Portland, Hartford, New London and Newport.

Boston was selected as the convention city only after a stiff fight by New Orleans and Kansas City. Booklets furnished by the Boston Chamber of Commerce showing views of the city and reciting its historical background won the day for Boston

Lewis Likely to Stay in N. E. Dry Service

The Rev. Jonathan S. Lewis, federal prohibition administrator for New England, will probably continue to hold an important position with the enforcement service after the latter is transferred from the Treasury to the Department of Justice, July 1, according to reports from Washington. Whether he will retain the title is uncertain

Lewis is administrator for a district that includes all New England, but the various districts will be reorganized and Connecticut will probably be added to New York, with the five other New England States constituting one district

Dedham Protests Street Widening

Citizens of Dedham, protesting against the widening of Washington st., will voice their objections at a special town meeting to be held tomorrow night, Friday, June 27

The destruction of trees bordering it occasions the protest

Another matter to be decided is the amount of money to be appropriated to rebuild and resurface Washington st. from curb to curb, instead of widening it.

Reserve Cop Gets Berth

Reserve Police Officer John R. Garrigan will be appointed to the regular force to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of Patrolman Charles E. Backman.

PLUMBERS PUT IN TOWN CRIER

Taking a hint from the Tercentennial, the Plumbers Exposition at Mechanics Building has resorted to an old fashioned Town Crier to announce events—and it works

Bell in hand he strides through the corridors in Colonial costume, and besides lending a touch of the Tercentenary to this big convention, he never fails to attract the desired crowd

One of the interesting exhibits attracting much attention at the convention is an early shower bath apparatus. It is handmade from lead, and consists of nothing more than an oval box with holes punched in the bottom. It was made for nothing but cold water.

Another attraction is an exhibition of how pipes are made, by a manufacturer whose plant produces 25 miles of one-half-inch pipe a day. Flat pieces of steel are heated almost white, drawn from the furnace through a round open and ironed into straight tube by two rollers

Milwaukee and Detroit are angling for the 1931 convention. Atlantic City is also in the running, but has its hopes really set for 1932.

Her companion and driver of the automobile, Ansel E. Baker, 21, of Bayfield st., Squantum, was badly cut by flying glass about the head and face.

As a result of an investigation, officers from the Milk st. station found that Baker was driving the car in Atlantic ave. and when near Northern ave. the machine skidded causing Baker to lose control of the machine, which ran onto the sidewalk and crashed into a sign post. The car overturned, Baker and his girl companion being thrown to the street.

DEMANDS HOME OWNERS GET LIGHT CUT

Consumers' Attorney Declares Edison Company Taxes Not Excessively High

Because residential customers use their current other than during the "peak" hours, this fact should be to their advantage, Wychffe C. Marshal, attorney for consumers seeking reduced rates from the Boston Edison Co. argued today before the Public Utilities Commission

From an exhaustive analysis of figures and exhibits presented by the company, Marshall contended commercial and other users are the principal cause of expense to the lighting company, and therefore should bear more of the charges

He attacked the statement by the company that the Edison, if relieved of taxes, could sell its current at the same rate as municipally-owned plants

A study of the company's books, he said, showed that excluding Federal taxes, the levy paid by the Edison company did not total more than one-half of one cent per kilowatt hour to a customer

INA CLAIRE IS SELECTED FOR A LEADING ROLE IN 'THE ROYAL FAMILY'

FILM WILL BE MADE IN NEW YORK

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor

Copyright, 1930 by Universal Service Inc.

LOS ANGELES, June 26—When a girl takes off as much weight as Ina Claire has lately, you are pretty safe in wagering that it is movies in the back of her mind. Maybe Ina didn't diet but when I saw her at the Embassy she looked as if she had lost pounds. At that time I put it down to a desire on her part to look her best in "Rebound," her stage play. Since then I learned she has been given the feminine lead in "The Royal Family."

Ina will play the role that is supposed to be Ethel Barrymore, the extravagant, lovable, fascinating daughter of the Drew family. Frederic March draws the John Barrymore role and both Miss Claire and Mr. March will journey to New York where the picture will be made. Now if they can only get Haides Wright for Mrs. Drew and Sylvia Field for Ethel's daughter, the cast will be perfect. I bet great stors by this picture for the play was excellent entertainment.

CHARLES ROGERS, who first put Corinna Griffith on the map as a big star, and who was responsible for Ken Maynard's debut as a screen cowboy, telegraphs to announce his return to pictures. Charles, who is a pioneer, having been a manager with the old Selznick company, has agreed to make four independent productions to be shown in all class A houses of the R. K. O. company and to be released by Radio Pictures. This is Charlie's first active step as a producer since he parted company with Asher, Small and Company. He is negotiating with Universal Pictures for space to make his pictures and he promises there won't be a dud among the four. Also we have Charlie's solemn promise that he will soon tell us more of the personalities he has signed and some of the stories he has bought. Wouldn't it be interesting if Corinna Griffith returned to him or if Colleen Moore made a picture on this interesting independent program?

PETITE MARION NIXON will succeed Alice White as the pet flapper at First National. Perhaps I shouldn't express myself in just this way, since First National has been at great pains to say that "College Lovers" does not specialize in a college flapper. Marion plays a serious minded girl who works her way through college.

SNAPSHOTS of Hollywood collected at random: Marion Nixon, in a becoming pink sweater and white skirt, exhibiting a new engagement ring and a new diamond bracelet bought for her by her husband, Edward Hillman, Jr., to replace the ones stolen on the train. Hoot Gibson wearing a new star sapphire given him as a wedding present by Sally Eilers. Eisenstein, famous director, being given a luncheon at the Ambassador. The rehearsal of Sally Eilers and Hoot Gibson's wedding going smoothly. Hoot's ranch, only 40 minutes by motor from town and easy of access, a beautiful place for a wedding. Polly Moran announcing that Greta Garbo has the best sense of humor of any of the Hollywood stars. Richard Barthelmess going to Calabasas every day on location. Barbara Bennett being voted as having the most beautiful eyes of any screen star in Hollywood. Her husband, Morton Downey, agreeing with that opinion. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

FRED WARING AT MET

Fred Waring couldn't make either the college glee club or orchestra at Penn State University but he at the Metropolitan now and when he gets his pay envelope it will be in five large figures. It is a Horatio Alger story that starts with four boys in high school in Tyrone, Pa. They were Fred Waring, his brother, Tom Waring, Polly McClintock, and Freddy Buck. They played for all the school parties, sang in the glee club and conceded they were pretty hot.

Fred Waring

Great-grandfather William Waring had founded Penn State, so they all enrolled there and landed on the campus, determined to make history. When the glee club and orchestra directors couldn't see them for a free trip near the opposite, Tyrone, added four other unappreciated geniuses and christened it a dance orchestra. This went on for three years. Then came a break.

They went to Ann Arbor to play for the J-Hop. They were to perform in the gym annex. Two real bands were furnishing the music for the main event. Before the evening was over the dancers had crowded into the annex to hear those eight boys from Penn State. They had it and all the other pennouns.

GOSSIP ALONG NEW YORK'S RIALTO

New York, June 26

The "beach" no longer refers to that stretch of wide open cement across from the Palace Theater. It means Brighton so far as Broadway is concerned.

In fact for the next two months Brighton Beach is likely to look more like Broadway than Broadway looks like itself. A casual survey yesterday of the new shows in the offing showed the drama going in strenuously for a seaside sun-tan.

"Jungle Love," one of those tropical plays, is offering the waves competition this week at the beach. And marshaled behind it is a list of handy successors.

* * *

In the weeks that follow, David Belasco's new comedy, "Dancing Partner," "The Second Little Show," "A Farewell to Arms," as staged by Rouben Mamoulian for Al Woods' "International," another Al Woods production, "The Three Graces," and "Almost a Honeymoon" will move in and out of the Brighton.

* * *

That is the incomplete booking of one beach theater, and if you do not think the beaches are popular along Broadway, you have forgotten Atlantic City and Asbury Park.

* * *

George M. Cohan will bring his next production to town some time in August. It is "Release," the play by Dr. Louis K. Anspacher, who has not had one of his pieces sent hereabouts since the days Nazimova played in "Dagmar."

The Cohan revival season at the Fulton Theater ends Saturday night, when "The Song and Dance Man" packs up his dancing shoes.

* * *

Sophie Tucked said good bye to Broadway yesterday. She sailed for England. She is taking with her 19 trunks of clothes and "Follow the Star," which Jack Yellen, Dion Titheradge and Douglas Furber wrote for her. Weather permitting a speedy voyage, "Follow the Star" will go into rehearsal next week with a London opening announced for Labor Day at the Adelphi Theater.

BUY WHISKERS IN FILMING BIG HOUSE

Probably the strangest purchase ever made to film a picture was that in connection with filming The Big House," M-G-M's new prison picture which will open Monday at Loew's State.

Adolph Seidel one time aviator now a makeup expert, was detailed to play the prison barber and shave Robert Montgomery's head. To play a convict, he was told he'd have to shave off his Van Dyke.

"Nix!" he protested. "Why! The Great Von Hindenburg once admired these whiskers. I must be paid to do that!"

As he was under salary, they didn't see how to do that. Harry Sharrock, production manager, solved it by buying the whiskers charging them to properties and then having them amputated.

RUNYON SAYS

by Damon Runyon

Copyright, 1930 by Universal Service, Inc.

NEW YORK, JUNE 26—JOE CHOYINSKI, to this day accounted the greatest Jewish heavyweight of all time, remarks brusquely of foul claiming:

Old Joe took pen in hand, out in Cincinnati where he is now an athletic instructor, immediately after the Sharkey-Schmeling fight, and, steaming with indignation, wrote to George Coxey, his old pal of his big town days.

George Coxey is a pudgy man whose facile fist has jotted down life insurance policies on most of the Broadway mob. George used to be a boxer before he got tangled up with the New York life, and he still keeps in touch with all the veterans.

"Too bad the big go ended so disastrously from a spectator's standpoint," comments Joe. "Do you know that there is not a man today (if there is I don't know him) who knows how to deliver a left-hand body punch. Nearly every fight someone has to be cautioned about a low blow, and then when a fellow is hit he carries on awful."

Doctors Blamed for Number of Fouls

OLD JOE SNIFFS AT THE custom that prevails in some sections of having a foul claimer examined in the ring by a doctor in fact, Joe seems inclined to blame the medicos for the fouls.

"They pull a man's tights back and look at the area struck and shout foul," he comments, "when as a matter of fact there is nothing to show them that a foul has been committed. It takes several minutes for a congestion to appear.

"Schmeling had to be carried from the ring? What for? There is no sympathetic connection between the motor nerves of the legs, and that part of the anatomy when a foul occurs, so they are all cheating when they plead they cannot walk.

"A man should be given fifteen minutes rest when unintentionally fouled, and two rounds taken from his opponent. That would make the erring one work hard to overcome the handicap."

Choyinski Fought Best Men in His Day

JOE IS RISING 62 YEARS OF age, but the last time I saw him, which was several years ago, he looked in good physical condition. It is remarkable how many of the old gladiators maintain their health and spirits as compared to the generation that succeeded them.

Choyinski was born November 8 1868, in San Francisco. He began fighting when he was about 16, and he went along for 20 years, meeting all the best men of his time. He never weighed much more than 170 pounds, and in this day would have been accounted too small for the heavyweights.

But when Joe was fighting, they didn't have a light heavyweight division. It you were under middleweight, you were a heavyweight. There was no stop in between. So Joe fought the men of his era who would correspond in size with the Sharkeys and the Schmelings, and the Striblings, and Paolinos of today.

For 20 years the Jewish fistic followers have been hoping for another Choyinski. They have had their hopes momentarily aroused at different times by Armand Emanuel, and Yale Okun, and Jack Gross, and a lot of others, but in the last analysis not one could lace old Joe's shoes, fistically speaking.

He was a good boxer, and a good hitter. Some of his battles made ring history. He fought his town rival, James J. Corbett, four or five times. Their 28-round battle on a barge at Benicia, Cal., is one of the great episodes of fistic annals. Corbett won. Corbett always had something on old Joe, who was young Joe then.

Four of Joe's Foes Were Champions

WHEN YOU SCAN CHOYINSKI'S list of battles you find a brief record of much of the ring history of the period between 1886 and 1904. You find the names of no less than four different heavyweight champions of the world, beginning with Corbett.

He met John L. Sullivan in an exhibition in San Francisco in 1891. He bested Bob Fitzsimmons, who succeeded Corbett, a five-round draw in Boston in 1894, which was before Fitz became heavyweight champion.

In 1901, Choyinski pumped down to Galveston, Tex., and flattened a long, lean black dock walloper in three heats. The dock walloper's name was Johnson. He was afterwards to become heavyweight champion.

BETTING EVEN ON GARDEN TUSSLE

By JACK CONWAY

The speculative element is betting even money that the youthful Bob "Bibber" McCoy, former Holy Cross football hero, wins the heavyweight wrestling championship of the world from Gus Sonnenberg in their finish bout at the Boston Garden tonight.

McCoy has crashed his way to the front during the past year. He has used the same kind of football tactics which enabled Sonnenberg to win the world's title from Stranger Lewis and then go on to dispose of most of the old school of wrestlers.

Jack Conway

It will be the second meeting between Sonnenberg and McCoy. In their last tussle, "Bibber" scored the first fall of the match and was well on his way to the championship when a bad break in the luck tipped the scales against him.

In that contest, McCoy stopped Sonny's flying tackle. Meanwhile "Bibber" used football tactics himself. It was a clash between the gridiron methods of Dartmouth and those of Holy Cross.

Paul Bowser was obliged to use all of his ability as a matchmaker to arrange tonight's bout. Sonny didn't want any more of McCoy's game. One could hardly blame him after watching the way the Holy Cross warrior smashed him around in their last engagement.

Fans Rooting for McCoy to Win

The same crowd that rooted for Sonny to flick Lewis will be on hand tonight, cheering for a McCoy victory. That is the way of the sport mob. It is with a star until he reaches the heights. It then wants to pull him down to the same level of the ordinary mortals.

The demand for the defeat of Sonnenberg has been on for some time. The boys feel they have a winning candidate in McCoy. He knows the Sonnenberg system of wrestling is intelligent and is armed with courage and strength.

McCoy, however, should not make the mistake of underestimating the champion. When Gus defeated Lewis, about all he had was a fighting heart, courage, his flying tackle and the strength of 100 men.

A year and a half spent barnstorming around the country, during which time he has clashed with all kinds of wrestlers, has given Sonny considerable polish. He can now defeat most of the so-called headliners without resorting to any thing but orthodox wrestling holds.

I look for Sonny to attempt to try McCoy to some trick holds tonight. So "Bibber" will be wise to be on his guard.

Record Crowd Will Witness the Tussle

Paul Bowser says the Garden will be filled to capacity tonight. Sonny has always been a great drawing card here, while McCoy also has a big following. The title match is what the dear old promoters call a "natural."

The main bout will enter the ring as near 10 o'clock as possible. Promoter Bowser has been assured by officials of the B. & M. that adequate train service will be given, with special trains leaving the North Station 15 minutes after the last bout.

The bout will be preceded by the most brilliant preliminary card of the year. Joe Malcewicz of Utica will meet Joe DeVito of Providence in the semi-final bout, and in the preliminaries, John Kilonis will be paired with Jack Wagner, Jack Sherry with Stanley Stasiak, Dan Koloff with Count Zarvoff, Henri Duprane with Harry Mammua, Stanley Pinto with Renato Garzini and Axel Anderson with Jack Ganson.

MAT CHAMP AND CHALLENGER CLASH

Gus Sonnenberg

Bob "Bibber" McCoy

CLOSE FOLLOWERS OF THE mat game are betting even money that Gus Sonnenberg, heavyweight wrestling champion, will lose his crown when he meets Bibber McCoy, Cambridge challenger. Both men specialize in the flying tackle.

Braddock Hopes to K. O. Monte

A crashing right-hand punch that has already ruined Tommy Loughran, Pete Latzo, Jimmy Slattery and Tuffy Griffiths is the weapon James J. Braddock will depend on to stop Joe Monte when they meet in the main bout of the Avon A. C. tourney next Wednesday night at Fenway Park.

Braddock's right hand is positive death. He hit Griffith with it only once and took all the fight out of him. He feels sure that he will chill the aggressive young Monte.

FIELDS ENTRY IS WINNER

New Castle, England, June 26 (AP)—Marshall Fields' "Quarter Session" won the John Osborne Handicap plate today. R. P. Botterill's "Sir Pieton" was second and H. Stobart's "Compound Fracture" was third. Only four ran.

Englishman Wins French Golf Title

Dieppe, France, June 26 (AP)—Ernest Whitcombe, English professional, won the French open golf championship yesterday on the Dieppe course with a card of 290 for 72 holes. Two Americans participated, Alaric DeForest and H. Brower. DeForest's card of 300 was the best among the amateurs.

Bacon and Butts Win in Salem Consolation Golf

While the championship fight of the annual Salem Country Club four-ball invitation was resting this morning, the Consolation Division, composed of teams that met with defeat yesterday, went into action.

Fritz Bacon of Oakley and Chester Butts of Charles River did a terrible job on W. F. Hunt and Kenneth Morse, winning by a 3 and 4 margin. Bacon was 3S on his own ball to the turn, was helped three strokes by Butts and give three strokes handicap for a net 32 for the first nine holes.

They were six up starting home and a win at the 10th made him up with eight to play. At the point of the match Hunt and Morse began to play a little golf, which was doubtless inspired by the Belmont player's birdie three at the 11th hole. The match went to the 14th before a decision was rendered.

R. F. Rivers and J. C. Bailey of the Country Club were three down to Lindsey Hooper and F. M. Bateldor at the 11th hole, but the latter staged a fine comeback and won their match, 2 up.

Hodder Pulls Team Through

Clark Hodder of Framingham and A. S. Brown, Jr., had a fine battle with H. W. Hill and C. R. Brown until Hodder went well coming home. The Hodder-Brown team was unable to click during the outward holes and rounded the turn only 1 up, but at the point Clark Hodder started to shoot some real golf and, by racing through the next seven holes in four under bogey and of a 3 up match secured one of the birdies netted them a win.

Alex Chisholm of Sandy Burr and J. Joseph of Salem were even for the 16 holes of the match.

H. H. Taylor and J. Sargent, but they were only able to win 3 and 2.

LOCALS LOSE FINAL TILT OF SERIES

By JOE CASHMAN

An eighth-inning rally, during which they knocked Jack Russell out of the box and scored all of their runs, gave the Detroit Tigers a 4 to 3 victory over the Red Sox in the sixth and final game of their series and enabled them to wash town with a 4 to 2 edge on the natives.

Up to the time Russell departed, the Wagnermen were enjoying a three-run lead, due in a large measure to some very creditable fielding behind Pat Hogsett, but in one unhappy inning of the game and in the latter chance of breaking even with the Tigers deserted them.

Even after Russell departed the Sox might still have won if they had a regular pitcher ready to go in, as they had when Jack was yanked, but Texas Jack had hurled such great ball during the first seven frames that only Ed Durham was kept in the game but he could not stem the Tigers attack.

It was a rough game to lose and rough enough, but the Sox didn't really earn any of their runs. Oliver's double, which resulted in the first run, would have been caught by a fielder less awkward than Billy Rothergill, and a muff of an easy fly by Johnson was responsible for the final two runs in the fourth.

Russell Yanked When He Loads the Bases

Bill Akers batting for Hayworth opened the eighth with a single and Hogsett followed with John son forced Hogsett but Todt singled to knock in Akers with the first Detroit run. Todt walked McBain and he was forced by Herman.

The Beaneaters got to Ted Alexander with the bases loaded just as he did to Jack and the energy shocked him so that he did the day before. Luting a single over second base which scored two runs.

Koenig followed with a fly to Webb, who made a perfect throw to the plate in plenty of time to catch McManus, but the ball took a queer hop over Dave Barrett's head, and the hostiles had the ball game.

Up to the eighth inning a Detroit runner had not reached second base, but after Rhyne in Manager Mike Gazella's place, had singled and Oliver had walked, Rothergill hit a double play pulled him out of the hole and a pair of runs came up on Duffy's Cliff by Ross Scarritt, helped him immensely, on two occasions.

Scarritt had quite a day. In addition to starring in the field he knocked in Oliver with the first Sox run with a long sacrifice and singled to start the Sox fourth inning rally, which saw Webb follow with a single and Johnson with a double to score Scarritt. Newsky Lesky's fly to Al Simmons and Berry's long drive to Goslin ended the long bout in center.

The box made it possible for the Tigers to win after the fourth inning, but they really did not get going until the ninth.

Newsky singled through second base and Johnson doubled, scoring Mc Manus. Goslin singled to left, scoring Johnson and Newsky. Miller and Campbell called for Russell's delivery but he refused to pitch and was replaced by Kamm to face Rothergill.

Pat Hogsett was the winning pitcher, although he was touched for nine hits. He was in trouble in the second inning when he passed Todt and Barrett with two out, but got out of the jam when Johnson popped up to Pinky Hayworth in foul territory.

Moller2 Up on Forrest After 18 Holes in College Golf

PHIL FINLAY EVEN WITH PERRY

Oakmont, Pa., June 26 (AP)—Eight golfers remaining in the intercollegiate championship today found conditions good for their 36-hole matches with only a gentle breeze fanning the course.

Larry Moller of Notre Dame was 2 up over Marshall Forrest of Yale at the end of 18 holes of their 36-hole match. Moller turned homeward 4 up, but both played poor golf on the second nine and the Yale player recovered two of the holes lost earlier to the Notre Dame golfer.

Phil Finlay of Harvard and Sam Perry of Alabama went to nip-and-tuck all even. The Harvard player was 1 down at nine holes, but squared the match and went 1 up at the 17th. At the 18th Finlay's ball found an unplayable lie and he conceded the hole to the Alabaman, leaving the match level.

Fuller Six Up on Eaton of Harvard

Winston Fuller, University of California, was six up on Charles S Eaton, Harvard, at the half-way point of their 36 hole match.

Eaton holed a 20-foot putt for a half at the 18th, but Fuller covered the last nine holes in 36 strokes, one over par, to increase a one-hole advantage at the turn to six at the 18th.

Kent Crew Works Hard for Regatta

Henley-on-Thames, England, June 26 (AP)—The workouts of the Kent school crew in preparation for the Thames challenge cup event of the Royal Henley regatta next week proceeded steadily today.

This morning the school rowed from the starting post to the barrier in 2 minutes 15-seconds and then continued on to Fawley's boathouse, a distance of about three-quarters of a mile, in 3 minutes, 15 seconds. The trial was considered very good by the rowing critics.

The American crew is scheduled for a full course trial tomorrow. At present seven-inch blades are being used as compared with the normal 6-inch English blades.

Babe 2 Home Runs Ahead of Record

Chicago, June 26 (AP)—Babe Ruth's home run barometer today disclosed that the big bambino was exactly eight days and two homers ahead of his record breaking schedule of 1927.

He hit two circuit smashes yesterday to give him a season's total of 26. Hack Wilson of the Cubs and Walter Berger of the Boston Braves are four blows behind Ruth's record-breaking pace.

CALIFORNIA NET STAR WINS AT LONGWOOD

Miss Josephine Cruickshank of the University of California, the top seeded player in the second annual girls' lawn tennis championship, which is being held at the Longwood Cricket Club, added another victim to her growing list yesterday at the Chestnut Hill Club.

The Californian defeated Maribel Vinson of Radcliffe in straight love sets, making it three matches which she won by the love route.

The way Miss Cruickshank is sweeping through the field, the Longwood galleries are beginning to wonder if she can get through the entire tournament in straight love sets. Judging by the form she displayed yesterday, the Californian stands a chance of hanging up this unusual record.

At the end of the third round matches yesterday four girls representing South were still left in the running. These girls will have to show remarkable tennis to stay in the tourney today.

Miss Marjorie Sachs of Radcliffe, the second seeded player, who was the runner-up for the title last season, also looked brilliant in her third round match with Emily Dunleavy of Bryn Mawr.

The Cambridge miss took the match without the loss of a game. Many of the experts at the Longwood Club are picking Miss Sachs to go into the final round.

Another local star, Miss Dorrance Chase, the Simmons player, who was seeded three, had little trouble in her third round play. Miss Chase defeated Nancy Jaynes of Vassar in straight sets, 6—3, 6—2. Today the Simmons entry will meet Kay Wiener of Smith in a quarter final round.

Catherine Boyden of Vassar continued to show fine form in her third round play, in which she defeated Ann Wolcott of Bryn Mawr in straight sets, 6—4, 6—4. With the exception of Miss Cruickshank Miss Boyden is the only girl from out of the State left in the tourney.

Virginia Watson, Kay Wiener, Fanny Curtis and Katherine Park are the Smith girls who are upholding the honor of that college in the tourney. These girls will find the going rather troublesome today when they meet the seeded players in the quarter final round.

Play in the college doubles got under way yesterday and the first round and most of the second round matches were completed.

Today the remaining matches in the second round and the third round will be held. The quarter final round of the singles is also scheduled for today.

Blenus Victor by K. O. in Dilboy Show

There was plenty of entertainment in the amateur bouts put on by the Dilboy Post at Dilboy Field Somerville, last night. In the finals Homer Blenus of Jamaica knocked out John Milbury, former Somerville football star, in the first round. Blenus payed football for Jamaica two years ago.

Revere Blanks Newton in Twi Game

Revere played fine ball at Curtis Park, Revere, last night and trimmed Newton Upper Falls, 3 to 0, in a Hub Twi League game. It was the second time in nine starts that Newton has been dumped. Walsh twirled a great game for the home team and allowed only three hits. Rizzo starred for Revere with a terrific drive over the left field fence for a home run. Proctor played a sweet fielding game for Newton and got one of the hits.

'Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

Harvard, Notre Dame, Alabama and Southern California are bitter as a result of the draw for match play in the Intercollegiates at Oakmont. The Crimson got the tough end break when the draw brought Phil Finlay and Jim Baldwin together for the first round, but the others have a logical protest when their players are forced to meet in the second round.

At intercollegiate championships the draw is a numerical one. After the dissatisfaction over this year's draw, a demand will doubtless be made to change the system.

Already many golfers in this area are seeking bids for the annual Country Club of New Bedford invitation. Dana Gillingham has been unable to keep his mind on golf at Salem due to the avalanche of requests for invitations made by players as soon as they learn that he is one of the main cogs at New Bedford.

The betting favors the 71 shot by Clark Hodder of Framingham at Winchester weathering the effort of Horton Smith and Leo Diegel next Wednesday.

As his partner for the Salem four ball was ill, Fred Bogardus played the better half of R. B. Enos and H. Marshall but the former English high school all around athlete did not do so well. He was on the wrong end of a 8 and 6 match.

Evidently the heat affected Bill Burk and Al Johnson in the first round yesterday, for although they actually won their match with Clark Hodder and A. S. Browne, Jr., at the 36th hole, they went along laboring under the impression that they were two down. After Johnson had squared the match at the 18th with a birdie three, off they went and played five extra holes.

Burk and Johnson did not discover their error until after lunch and the fact that they had played seven extra holes in the intense heat which hung over the Salem Country Club, did not cause them any noticeable extra joy.

Unfair handicaps ruined Ken Mores of Belmont and Mike Hunt of Oakley. The Belmont-Oakley combination were four under par for the 15 holes they played against C. E. Eaton and C. E. Collins, but they were the losers.

D. E. Emerson of Belmont Spring encounters tough luck every time he visits the Salem Country Club. During the W. G. A. championship week he went to Salem to play with Miss Rosamond Vahey in the mixed foursome and lost his pet mashie. Yesterday, some vandal broke into his golf bag and made a nice clean up, including his caddy's lunch.

Howard "Shorty" Davis, the donor of the Davis Field House and hockey rink at Dartmouth, played with Heinz Hyde and gave a fine account of himself in spite of the fact that he had not swung a club since he left Scotland, shortly after the British amateur championship.

Cambridge White Sox Play on Sunday

The strong Cambridge White Sox will go after another victim on Sunday afternoon, opposing the well-known Dorchester A. A. at Russell Field, North Cambridge.

Eddie Carney, who twirled Fambridge Latin to its last Suburban League championship in 1928 will make his debut in a Sox uniform. Jim Dudley, former Harvard back stop will catch. The visiting battery will be Krauss and Martin.

Stepdaughters of War

mother is thinking of you—boasting of the life she has so nobly given—the life you thought was your own but which is hers to squander as she thinks fit.

"My boy is not a slacker, thank God"—cough away, little boy, cough away. What does it matter providing your mother doesn't have to face the shame of her son's cowardice?

These are sitters. The man they are hoisting up beside me and the two who sit in the ambulance. Blighty cases, broken arms and trench feet. Mere trifles. The smell? Disgusting, isn't it? Sweaty socks and feet swollen to twice their size—purple, blue, red—big black blisters.

Have I made you ill? I must again ask pardon. My conversation is daily growing less refined. I had forgotten certain words are not used in the best drawing rooms on Wimbledon Common.

But I am wasting time. I must be in a minute. I am nearly loaded. The stretcher they are putting on one side? Oh, a most ordinary exhibit. It is the groaning man to whom the smallest pill is red hell—a mere bellyful of shrapnel.

They are holding him over till the next journey. He is not as urgent as the five cripples lying there, that trunk without arms and legs, the remnants of a human being, incapable even of pleading to be put out of his misery because his jaw has been half shot away—no, don't look in his eyes, they are too alive, something of their malevolence might remain with you all the days—those sock-filled days—of yours—those sock-filled, committee-crowded days of yours.

Gaze on it well, you who have so nobly upheld your traditions, Mother and Mrs. Evans-Mawmington, take a good look at them, the heroes you will soon mantalize over until peace is declared and allow to rest in peace ever and ever, amen, afterwards.

Don't go. Spare a last glance for my last stretcher case, sobbering, unbelievable, unbandaged thing, a wagging lump of raw flesh on a neck, that was a face a short time ago. Mother and Mrs. Evans-Mawmington. Now it might be anything—a lump of liver, raw bleeding liver—that's what it resembles most—or this thing else, doesn't it? We can't tell its age, but the whimpering moan sounds young somehow. Like the fretful whimpers of a sick little child—a tortured little child—puzzled whimpers—who is he? For all you know, Mrs Evans-Mawmington, he is your Roy. He might be anyone at all, so why not your Roy? One shapeless lump of raw liver is like another shapeless lump of raw liver.

What do you say? Why don't they cover him up with bandages? How the hell do I know? I have often wondered myself, but they don't. Why do you turn away? That's only liquid fire. You've heard of liquid fire? Oh, yes. I remember your letter. "I hear we've started to use liquid fire too, that will teach those Germans, I hope we use lots and lots of it"—yes, you wrote that. You were glad some new, fiendish torture has been invented by the chemists who are running this war. You were delighted to think some German mother's son was going to have the skin stripped from his poor face by liquid fire—just as some equally patriotic German mother rejoiced when first she heard the sons of English women were to be burnt and tortured by the very newest war gadget out of the laboratory.

Don't go, Mother and Mrs. Evan Mawmington? don't go. I am loaded but there are over thirty ambulances not filled up. Walk down the line. Don't go, unless you want me to excuse you while you retch your inside out as I often do.

There are stretchers and stretchers you haven't seen yet—men with hopeless dying eyes who don't want to die—men with hopeless living eyes who don't want to live.

Wait, wait, I have so much, so much to show you before you return to your committees and your recruiting offices, before you add to your bag of recruits those young recruits you enroll so proudly with your patriotic speeches, your red-white-and-blue meetings, your white feathers, your insults, your lies—any bloody lie to secure a fresh victim—

What? You can't stick it any longer? You are going? I didn't think you'd stay. But I've got to stay, that's why I've got to stay. You've got me here and you'll keep me out here. You've got the blood—I am one of the splendid young women who are winning the war—

"Number Eight."

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Raquel Rojos, half-Spanish and half-American, goes from a desert town in Arizona to New York, where her exotic beauty attracts the attention of the famous Alphonse Courbet, who engages her as a model to go to Paris. She sails on the Chaire de France with a stunning blonde, Greta Tosak, as her companion. Raquel has put off her marriage to Jack Farrell, a young engineer, who was coming to New York to claim her. She retires after the first day at sea blissfully happy. Greta stays up

CHAPTER 26

From the depths of a sleep induced by sea air and an unstrained sense of security Raquel awoke with a start.

"Is he, could he, be on the ship?" Alarm in Raquel's voice. Had Farrell followed her? She could not shake off the haze of slumber.

"I don't know who HE is," she said, "but it's ten to one he missed the boat. The right ones always do."

"But this isn't the right one—"

"Then let's hope he fell off the dock trying to make it. There is a he on board, though. Sweet spirits! Look what he gave little Greta."

A handful of bills, as many as three she had carried in her blouse, was being waved in Raquel's face.

"Why—where—"

"And how! This girl is good. Just like having them served on a silver platter. Listen. You know that sugar daddy with the baggy pants—the one that sits next to me on deck?"

"Yes."

"Well, I arranged it so I ran into him accidentally on purpose after I sent you and Alphonse to bed. He was following me around all evening, like your aunt's pet poodle. I gave him a tumble every now and then so he wouldn't weaken."

"Why, Greta, that old fogy?"

"Old fogy! You didn't think I'd try my stuff on the Prince of Wales, did you? Well, anyway, after you'd gone I got to talking with this dodo, and he thought I ought to take a turn around the deck and I didn't say no. I said I'd have to go get a heavier wrap."

"Did you come in? I didn't hear you.

Keeps Secret
Raquel Promises

"No, dearie. You were in the arms of Morphine, or whoever it is. You know that string of French pearls I wore? The ones that go with this dress? Well, I took them off and put on my old string of my own. This all of 10 cents, believe it or not. With a fake emerald on it. If you could tell was all yellow off. Here's the emerald."

"Then we got to a dark part of the ship," she went on, "after I'd day had tried to encircle my nymph-like waist, I loosened the clasp and the pearls fell on the deck. I picked them up, and you ought to have heard me howl!

"No. Down here on my dresser. I pried it out with a nail file before I went back with my wrap. Daddy was on all fours hunting for it by the light of matches, and me crying that it was a family heirloom that belonged to my mother—wouldn't Hattie like that?—and I simply couldn't face my uncle—Uncle Alphonse—if it was lost. I threatened to call the purser, to have the ship searched. That's where daddy wilted."

"But why, if he thought you'd lost it?"

"Listen, angel. That old dodo's got a mama on the ship. And he was with me. You don't think that is the kind of news you can take home to the family, do you?"

"What did you do?"

"I wept. Copiously. So daddy-dug. He asked me how much it was worth, and I said I didn't know, but the jeweler said several hundred dollars. He gave me these few little tokens, and made me promise I wouldn't tell, but go and have the emerald replaced the minute I got to Paris. Oh joy, oh bliss, the bells are ringing."

"If M. Alphonse knew, he'd be upset."

"He'd throw a fit. So don't you upset him, dearie. You just forget it. You wouldn't tell—"

"Of course not."

Did Greta think she was that kind, an informer, like Lily in Keno Joe's place? An informer was lower than an animal, a crawling thing.

Saved Dollar
Then Raquel Laughs

"I didn't take you for a sneak," said Greta, laughing again. "Let's count 'em. One, two hundreds. A 50. Five 10s. Look at the five spots, and the lonesome Annies. Four hundred and ninety-nine dollars. The tightwad!"

"It is! What kind of an emerald does he think I can buy with that? I've got a good notion to go up and start crying all over again."

"What for? Is there in having money? All the fun is in getting it, and in getting rid of it. I haven't finished with old baggy pants yet, not by a long shot. Maybe you'd like to take a shirt at him, old dear."

Raquel shook her head.

"I'm afraid I'd make a failure," she said jokingly, and paused.

What was she adopting this holier than-thou attitude with Greta? Hadn't she done the same thing, "dug," with Bill Johnson? The ten-room stone house on the edge of town. The wedding trip to San Francisco and "Dear Joan" from Farrell. The trip on the train to Phoenix when she had schemed not to pay the conductor.

Would she come, eventually, to be like Greta? Getting things out of people for the mere sport of the game?

The Pleasantest Angling!

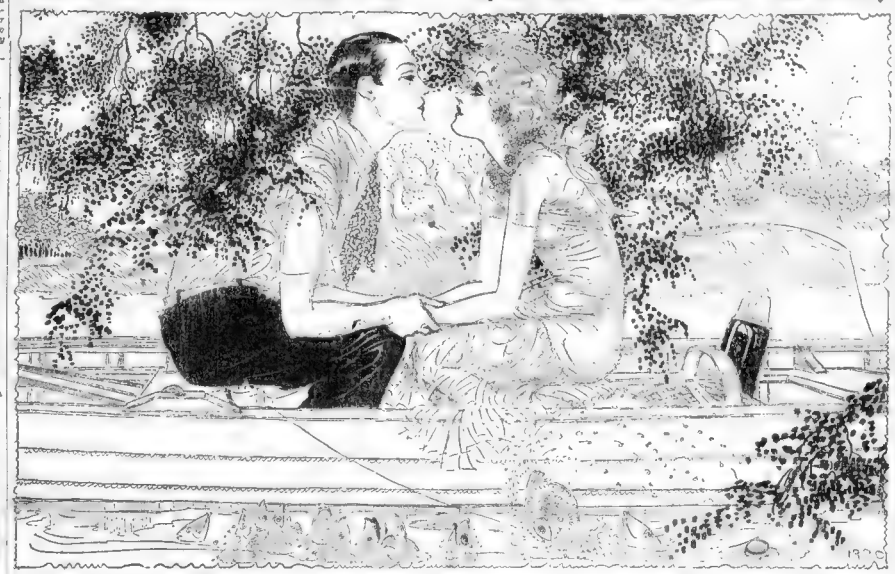
—For Both Messrs. Pike and Eel and Carp and Trout—and Two Lovers

Drawn by Nell Brinkley



A perfect fishing day. Bright-eyed perch and fat sunfish, with dyed fins and scales of molten gold and silver, rise and blow bubbles under a hazy, sunny sky. A perfect fishing day—but George and Georgette are angling for a little boy without fins. Perfect fishing day for the fish and for Love. Death for the slippery river inhabitant is far away and he can come to the top and sing "blip blip" in chorus, under the four ardent eyes in the boat, without fear.

The lone fisherman, with no time to waste on the beauty of the day or of Love, is the fellow to fear and stay close to the bottom for. There is one lone hand who is as harmless as the pair of lovers for the tawny finned. That's the editor fellow who just LOVES to fish. And this is what he means when he says it: to lie on his back, eyes shaded by a duck hat, with a boat flat-bottomed, stocked with lunch and plenty of the newest books; a line out, MAYBE, SOMEWHERE, he doesn't care much where; a hazy day, filtered gold sun and all the time in the world—on a slow Southern river. He loves to fish—THAT way. And that's the way the fish like a fellow to fish.

But lovers are the best river guests of all. The setting of the day is the thing to them. And the pretty fish are a part (a fetching part) of that setting. Sun and shadow, a lovely river, waving grass splashed with flowers, the busy silence of water and fields, the long, long day for dreams and beloved companionship, the leap of a living silver bow from the water, peace and ecstasy—a perfect fishing day for George and Georgette and the FISH.

For you know, of course, that they never caught a thing.

How to Keep Well

—By DR. R. S. COPELAND—

Label All Medicine Bottles

We all hate to read accounts of persons who are accidentally poisoned. But such a regrettable occurrence may happen in your home if you keep unlabeled bottles in your medicine cabinet.

Under no circumstances should you permit a bottle or box to stand in your home without the proper label. If the contents are poisonous have it printed on it the word 'POISON' in big letters.

Often when you want a drug you are in a hurry or are upset by the very accident or sudden illness which calls for the use of the drug. This makes it easy to forget the location of the particular bottle you want.

All drugs are more or less poisonous. Even though some particular drug may seem mild to you, it may be harmful to a susceptible person. For this reason, from other, it is unwise to take any drug unless it is prescribed by the doctor.

Medicines to be of value must be fresh. If kept too long they get stale and germs multiply in the liquid. Ointments, particularly those made with an animal or vegetable oil, soon become rancid. Some drugs lose their medicinal value when exposed to light and air.

Many a housewife who is careful that her pantry shelves contain only fresh canning and flavoring, will have on her medicine shelf stale and rancid drugs. These, too, may be in unlabeled bottles or boxes.

The average household has a very few drugs, especially drugs which can do any harm. Have one place where all the household remedies are kept.

Always, no matter what the hurry, read the label before applying the remedy. If you do this there will never be a mistake in your home.

WE'VE MADE a habit of them! Ever since pajamas gave up their retiring ways and came up nonchalantly for social activities, the smart feminine contingent has given them a big hand. These gay casual garments somehow seem to satisfy the secret urge we all have to wear trousers, yet they cleverly keep a feminine attitude on design.

* * *

AND WHAT latitude in the scheme of fashionable things these pajamas allow themselves. They not only remain firmly intrenched in the boudoir, but they sally forth in gingham to the kitchen. In linen they putter about the garden or in colorful swashbuckling array of silk or cotton they lounge on the beach. Not to mention the luxurious ones that tea or dine informally.

* * *

PAJAMAS are a year 'round habit which every wardrobe should cultivate. One suit or ensemble is better than none—but ten suits would more nearly answer modern needs. Those who dubbed pajamas as merely a fad have now become entirely converted to their practical chic. They are the very ones who thus summer will be wearing them like uniforms for beach, garden or house.

* * *

* * *

OF SUNNY yellow linen, with large patch pockets over each knee, and one below the left shoulder—it buttons to the round neckline, and is worn over a cotton mesh polo shirt with turn-down collar and short sleeves almost reaching the elbow. A beret is worn in soft brown knit material; and laced canvas beach shoes.

* * *

OUT IN the garden, or down by the beach, you will want something rather dashing. There is every imaginable sort of style for choice. Linens in all colors, printed or plain, ginghams made like overalls to be worn over a shirt or bathing suit, bright silks or dizzily patterned woolens. One gay costume seen recently was composed of five separate pieces, all in dotted linen.

Feeding the Eight-Months-Old Baby

By MARTHA LEE

Organizer and Conductor of New England's Largest Homemakers' Club of Over 37,000 Enrolled Members

Mrs. F. J. G. of Newtonville asks for the proper diet for her little girl, eight months old, says she has been giving her baked potato, spinach, carrot, soft-boiled eggs, and vegetables and chicken soup and cereals since she was five months old. After a friend recently advised her against giving the baby any more egg and potato until she is older, she was over anxious.

Martha Lee

The feeding schedule for a baby of this age calls for four feedings daily at four-hour intervals and a feeding at 10 p. m., making five feedings in 24 hours and seven to eight ounces at each feeding, or 35 to 40 ounces a day. In addition to this, fruit juice, broth, beef juice, egg, strained cereal, dried bread or milk crackers and certain vegetables may be given.

The fruit juices, Dr. Holt says, should begin at seven or eight months or, with some children, as early as five or six months, especially if the child is being fed with pasteurized or sterilized milk. At first only two or three teaspoons a day are given and the quantity is gradually increased until the child, when 10 months old, takes from two to three tablespoons of fruit juice a day. This should be given halfway between the feedings. Orange juice is probably the best, but the juice of fresh peaches or other ripe fruits or the juice of cooked fresh or canned tomatoes may be used in the same way as orange juice. But all should be carefully strained.

At nine or 10 months, beef juice may be given, two teaspoons a day, diluted with the same quantity of water just before the midday feeding. In two weeks the quantity may be doubled and in four weeks one ounce may be given. At one year of age the child should be taking not more than two or three tablespoons of beef juice. This is made by cutting beef into small cubes, placing it in a mason jar just covering with cold water and setting it in the refrigerator over night. Beef juice is especially important for pale and anemic children. Mutton or chicken broth may be used for diced beef juice two or three ounces at a time and given on alternate days that the beef juice is given.

Half a cooked egg may be given at nine or 10 months and the amount increased until a whole egg is given. It's to be lightly salted and given once or twice a week in place of the broth or beef juice I have mentioned. The yolk of a hard boiled egg may also be grated fine and added to the diet of the child as young as six or seven months.

Toast and crackers can be given as soon as the child can nibble a little, usually at nine or 10 months. The cracker should be given at feeding time and at first but once a day. Its chief value is in teaching him how to chew his food.

By the ninth or tenth month well cooked strained cereals may be given with a spoon, with some of the milk from the bottle served on them. At first one tablespoon gradually increased to two tablespoons may be given once, and later twice a day. This may take the place of a part or all of the cereal which has been given as gruel in the milk.

At 11 or 12 months the strained vegetables can be given or with some children, as early as nine or ten months. Green vegetables are best, particularly spinach. Next to this come beet tops, string beans, carrots, asparagus tips and very young green peas. All should be fresh, thoroughly cooked in a small amount of water and rubbed to a smooth pulp through a fine sieve. At first not more than a half-teaspoon daily should be given with the regular feeding. Then the quantity of the vegetables may be gradually increased, two or three teaspoonfuls by the time the child is a year old. These vegetables will supply the iron greatly needed by the child.

I should not make any change in my child's diet on account of the hot weather except that during hot weather it is well to make the proportion of fat in the formula less than during the cold weather. The fat is reduced by using formulae from whole milk in place of the 7 per cent top milk which is customary. Water should be given freely between the feedings.

Any questions on baby-care I can help with? Yours for service.

Martha Lee

Correct Manners

—By MRS. BEECKMAN—

Proper Calling Cards

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

I want to have some calling cards engraved, and would like to know if I should put Mrs. John Brown or Mary Smith Brown, or Mr. and Mrs. John Brown? Should they be engraved or printed? If my husband has cards, should Mr. John Brown, or John Brown be proper?

E. E. G.

Calling cards are always engraved, never printed. The correct wording is "Mrs. John Brown," and the address in one corner. The man's card should be Mr. John Brown, never plain John Brown. Or the cards may be printed Mr. and Mrs. John Brown. Your writing and stationery are very nice.

Announcing Elopement

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you please tell me how one [illegible] a hotel register—"Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Dill," or how? And if [illegible] sister and wife is along, how [illegible] sign for her? Also when a girl elopes and has no mother or father, [illegible] send announcement to their friends?

L. E. M.

A hotel register is always signed "Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Dill," or Mr. E. H. Dill and wife. To indicate the presence of a child, you would write Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Dill and young sister. An elopment presupposes a desire for secrecy, and in that case no announcements could be sent. There may be some near relative who will send out announcements for you, or you may wait until after the ceremony and send them in your own name.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.)

Heart and Home -:- -:- by Beatrice Fairfax

Seeks an Occupation

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 17, rather pretty, somewhat popular, not very strong, and undecided as to how to earn my living. My cousin became a trained nurse, in two years married a doctor and is now very happy. Are most nurses contented, and do you advise me to become one?

GOLDILOCKS.

Dear Goldilocks: A few nurses do marry doctors, but I assure you the chances are very much against it. So if you should decide to begin the long and rigorous course that a trained nurse must undergo, do not carry in your heart any hope of achieving that particular kind of romance. Since you are not strong, it is probably not the career for you, in any case, so I advise you to think no more about it. Is there no kind of work that you would be interested in undertaking for its own sake? If not, why not try a business course?

Be Patient With Him

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

Am a steady reader of your column and would like your advice on the following: A certain young man of 28 has been keeping company with me off and on for about a year and writing letters every week. I've found out also that he has been with another girl for past three or four years. He says he has been trying to shake her for the last year and can't. What should I do? Not bother him any more or what? I like him a lot. Would be hard to give him up. But I could.

ANXIOUS

Dear Anxious: There is really nothing to get alarmed about. The young man may be trying to make up his mind, or, as he says, trying to get rid of the other girl as gently as possible. On the other hand, he may be wasting your time. The only thing to do is be patient, but do not refuse other friendships for this man's sake unless he shows more definite signs of dependability.

Miss Fairfax will be pleased to answer queries by readers regarding their problems of the heart. Please write on one side of the paper only.

EVENING New York Stocks AMERICAN News of Street MARKETS

STOCK MARKET ACTION AGAIN IMPROVES

New York, June 26—The stock market today again showed signs of throwing off the recessionary tendencies that have prevailed, with occasional one-day interruptions, since the first of the month.

Absorption of the floating supply of dividend paying shares caught the bears when they sought to cover in the last hour and advances of 4 to 13 points resulted.

U. S. Steel and General Electric rose more than 3, American Can and American Telephone 4, Westinghouse Pump and Allegheny Auto 8, Allied Chemical 5, Eastman Kodak 12 and J. I. Case 13. The market closed strong.

TOBACCO BRIGHT SPOT

The overnight announcement of the American Tobacco common split-up and $4 extra dividend was a bright spot in the gloom that has pervaded the financial community for weeks, and the reduction in the annual dividend rate of Anaconda from $7 to $6, also announced soon after midday, was not as bad as had been commonly forecast of late.

Some weeks ago, Wall st. was looking for a reduction to $4, but during the last few days, Wall st. has been too pessimistic to look for anything better than $5.

As more railroads report May net operating income, the showing does not improve, with 25 reports now at hand, the aggregate decline is nearly 30 per cent from last year, but is nevertheless not so severe as that of April, when W. H. Brown, chairman of the executive committee of Rock Island, said he felt the bottom had been reached in the sag in movement of freight.

Call Money continued to cheapen, touching 1½ per cent for the first time in 13 years, after renewals at 2. The steady drop in interest rates has been expected of result in an increase in investment money into dividend paying stocks and bonds, but thus far has not been a conspicuous factor in either market.

Commission houses, however, report steady investment and moment buying of stocks at current levels.

ANACONDA COVERING

The market leaped forward under leadership of the American Tobacco issues at the opening, then sold off moderately, only to show greater strength later. The Anaconda dividend reduction brought heavy short covering into the stock, which rose more than 4 points, and other issues of the metal shares. American Tobacco common sold up 18, and the B shares 6 points. Eastman Kodak and Case also made wide gains.

Shares gaining 3 points or more for the afternoon include such issues as American Can, Westinghouse Electric, American Telephone, New York Central, Union Pacific and Consolidated Gas. U. S. Steel sold up about 2. A few shares touched new lows, however, including Norfolk & Western.

A squeeze against the shorts in Radio, General Foods, National Dairy Products and other specialties accounted for the turnover of a number of fairly large blocks on a rising price scale. A block of 13,000 shares of Radio sold at 36 and 15,000 General Foods at 94, up 1¼. U. S. Steel hit 157 for the first time since recording the year's lowest at 150.

Bond Prices Idle in a Dull Market

New York, June 26 (AP)—Listed bonds rallied today as prices moved little inclination to move one way or the other. The liquidation which has carried bond prices down steadily this week appeared to have spent itself and the downward course was partly checked. Buyers manifested interest in only a few prime and well diversified bonds and sales fell off sharply.

The better tone of the share market impacted strength to some of the most popular convertible bonds, but the sales were far below normal.

United Gas Adds to Directorate

New York, June 26 (AP)—The United Gas Improvement Company has increased its board of directors from 16 and elected Edward Hopkinson of Drexel & Co. and J. P. Morgan & Co. and Clarence H. Geist the new directors. Mr. Hopkinson also was elected an additional member of the executive committee.

Grand Union Sales for 24 Weeks Gain

New York, June 26 (AP)—Grand Union Company reports store sales for the 24 weeks to June 14 totaled $18,562,406, compared with $14,455,641 in the corresponding period last year, an increase of 15.2 per cent, with the same number of units in operation.

BOSTON STOCK PRICES ARE PUT HIGHER

Prices generally were put higher today on the Boston Stock Exchange. New Haven was up with a gain of better than a point as it again crossed the "hundred mark." American Telephone lifted around $4 a share. American Woolen preferred rebounded around $2 a share.

Short covering sent Anaconda up over $3 a share and was combined with some investment buying on the supposition that the copper industry has passed the worst period.

Greene Cananea Copper Co. declared quarterly dividend of 75 cents, placing the stock on a $3 annual basis, against $8 previously, payable Aug. 11 to stock of record July 12.

Andes Copper Co. declared quarterly dividend of 37½ cents, placing stock on a $1.50 annual basis, against $3 previously, payable Aug. 11 to stock of record July 12.

American Founders was down nearly a point. Boston Elevated preferred and Gillette added around a point. Edison recovered a third session. Calumet & Hecla Mining rose fractionally. Sullivan Machinery at 42 was at a new low. Although definite figures are not at hand covering operations of Sullivan Machinery Co for the first six months this year, it can be stated that invoiced sales will show a slight increase over the same six months of 1929. This also is largely to carry-over into the year of a substantial volume of unfilled orders.

Earnings of Sullivan Machinery in the first half-year give promise of comparing favorably with those of the 1929 initial six months. This should mean the $2 semi-annual dividend nearly covered.

Stevens Machinery declared regular quarterly dividend of $1 a share, payable July 15 to stock of record June 30.

Directors of the New England Grocery Products Co. have declared the current quarterly dividend of $1.62 each on the 6% per cent preferred shares, payable July 1 to stockholders of record June 30 1930.

Bangor & Aroostook Railroad's surplus after charges for May was $218,887 against surplus after charges of $78,331 for May, 1929, an increase of $143,556, or 190 per cent.

Surplus after charges for five months ended May 31 was $1,096,931 against surplus after charges of $855,000 for the corresponding period last year, an increase of $448,026, or 52 per cent.

Motor Boat Orders This Season Large

New York, June 26—Motor boat business of Horace E. Dodge Boat & Plane Corp reports a large booking of orders this season. President Dodge states:

"The new plant at Hampton Roads, Va., is in operation with production schedule of 4200 boats for 1930. It is working on a 54-hour schedule, with more than 700 men producing and delivering 40 boats a day. It has placed orders for 4200 Lycoming marine engines of 40 to 300 horsepower, and 1200 are on hand for the 1930 boats to be built the next 40 days."

Advice Is Free

Before you buy or sell stocks or bonds, you ought to secure unbiased expert advice. Send your investment inquiries with stamp to Frank H. Meloon, Financial Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston. All replies are made by mail direct.

KEEP IN BANK

L. J. B., Lynn—I am very much interested in your advice on investment. I have $1500, and am thinking of putting $500 in Radio Corp. or Radio-Keith. The rest I intend to keep in the bank. If you know of something better for investment, please let me know.

Ans.—The sum of $1000 is considered a sufficiently small bank reserve against emergency in these or any other days. Therefore we would not care to suggest your buying securities, however good.

NEED FACTS

Mrs. C. T., Worcester—I am a reader of your paper and need advice. What is your idea about buying Associated Gas & Electric "A"?

Ans.—With the facts before us about your circumstances, we could give impartial advice. Associated Gas & Electric, incorporated in 1906, controls a large public utility system with properties in various sections of the country. Earnings for the Class "A" stock in 1929 were $5.84 a share contrasted with $4.31 in 1928 and $3.75 in 1927. An initial quarterly dividend of 25 cents a share paid May 1, 1925, has since been maintained. In lieu of cash stockholders can take 1-40th share Class "A." The stock has equal participating rights with the common after payment on the Class "B" and common stocks of quarterly dividends equal to the aggregate quarterly priority dividend on Class "A." February 1, 1930, stockholders received 40 cents extra, [illegible] Class "A."

HERE'S A PLAN TO PUT END TO FALLING PRICES

By B. C. FORBES.

More important: What can bring recovery in both?

It comes from the Royal Bank of Canada.

This week the decline in commodity prices has gone further than ever before, carrying down many to the lowest levels since the war. Other countries are suffering similarly.

B. C. Forbes

"During the last two years," says the bank, "when speculation was making unprecedented demands upon the world's credit resources, this demand for credit came into direct competition with the requirements of business and industry in all countries, it is the influence of this tight credit upon world business conditions that is responsible for the present price debacle."

The stimulating effect of abundant credit, and the crippling effect of restricted credit, are illustrated by South America's experience. In 1913 U. S. investments in South America were less than $200,000,000, the bank points out. By 1928 they exceeded $2,200,000,000 Old industries were expanded, new industries established, roads were built, railroads extended and harbor facilities improved. South America's total foreign trade increased from $2,466,000,000 in 1922 to $4,040,000,000 in 1928. Annual exports doubled.

Then came the monetary stringency of 1928:

High rates available for loans for speculative purposes cut off the credit supply for development and ordinary trade. South America shared in the declines in values followed. Buying power was drastically curtailed. The difference between the volume of trade of South America in 1928 as the beginning of 1930 represents," says the bank, "the difference between prosperity and depression for many manufacturers in the United States."

Turning to remedies, the bank states:

"It is clear that the present world-wide depression was occasioned by credit stringency, and it seems a logical deduction that the recent easing of rates in the international money markets will produce the necessary correction in conditions.

"But the present low rates don't indicate an easy condition as surface appearances seem to imply. It is only a few of the banks in the largest cities that are over supplied with liquid funds.

"There can be no doubt that if the volume of circulation were immediately restored to the level that existed in November, the decline in prices since that date would be quickly counteracted."

* * *

Although the credit extended to member banks by the Federal Reserve is now "abnormally low," the bank reasons that "no immediate relief could be expected from increased loans to member banks. Then, "the decline in export and import business has reduced the supply of acceptances to unusually low levels. The acceptance market does not afford any substantial outlet for an increased volume of credit." Now comes the rub of the bank's proposed remedy for falling prices:

"The only other means by which the Reserve Banks can affect the market would be through the purchase of government securities. The latest balance sheet shows that they hold $597,000,000 of such securities.

"If the Reserve Bank should increase these holdings to one billion dollars, the member banks would find their credit balances with the Reserve System increased by substantially a like amount. . . . It should not be supposed that the total effect would be felt in the United States. Gold exports from the United States would follow unless other countries adopted similar policies; but the Central Banks of Great Britain and France have proceeded further with an easy money policy than has the Federal Reserve Bank, and the adoption by the latter of the measures suggested would benefit European banks to take further measures along the same lines, which might be expected to prevent effectively any abnormal movement of gold. The present depression is world-wide, but anything that will substantially reverse the trend in one country must tend to have a similar effect in all countries.

"To the objection that the proposal represents a policy of inflation, we suggest that it is justified under present conditions as a cure for the drastic deflation which has taken place during the past nine months."

At the Radio Dial

A most gracious, if pedantic introduction by Phil Cook brought forth a half hour of diverse entertainment on the California Melodies program over WNAC last night. An orchestra with a full tone and a subdued chorus played and sang. An Indian sounded not half bad, considering the native hodge podge he sang. Hawaiian representatives crooned and played in merry fashion, and the mature ones of 30 years, Mitzi Green, sang and imitated with waves of "it."

FIRST honors for being the first to honor Capt. Kingsford-Smith go to the Mobiloil program on last night. A Dvorak melody, "Estralita," and "Dvorak Memory" selections were irresistable. The orchestra stresses the more familiar numbers, producing a favorable reaction on the listeners.

Radio artists these days, know their powers and don't try to outdo them, it seems. For example, last night's "Manhattan Moods" program from WNAC was a presentation of the lighter music like operettas, old musical comedy hit numbers, spirituals and novelty numbers. The orchestra is capable of playing this type of music and they don't try to climb to heavier pieces, in the same manner of the clown who, when he became the leading clown tried to play "Hamlet."

When "The Southern Cross," arrives in New York this afternoon WNAC will carry the Columbia broadcast of the reception. The hour of the arrival is unknown but it is believed that the fliers will land about 5 o'clock.

POSSIBILITIES FOR A FOUL tonight are very plain, as radio listeners-are safe in turning to WLEX at 9 o'clock to hear the hold by hold description of the world championship wrestling match between Gus Sonnenberg and Bibber McCoy. Al Moffat of Gerry Harrison will announce the match between these two local boys.

THERE'S NO REST for weary senators, not to mention radio listeners. Tonight at 9:30 when Hiram Bingham will address the audience through WNAC on the subject of independence of the Philippine Islands. Senator [illegible] who is chairman of the Committee on territories and insular affairs, is opposed to the freedom of the Philippines and will answer the views expressed by Senator Hawes, who favors the independence of the islands.

ONCE AGAIN the Maxwell House Melodies present an interesting program tonight on WBZA at 9:30, when they contrast heated rhythm with romantic melodies and old favorites with the sophisticated strains of today.

CONCERNING RADIO

Edited by BILL WHIPPLE

We believe it is fitting that we devote some of the space on this page in adding our bit to the mighty welcome which Boston is sending forth to that intrepid hero of frozen wastes and transatlantic daring, Admiral Richard E. Byrd.

Not in the spirit of hero-worshipers will Boston citizenry turn out tomorrow afternoon to greet this conqueror, in such manner as have but few men ever been received, but rather to pay homage to the sturdy, unbeatable soul of one who, through almost unsurmountable obstacles, heart-breaking tasks and innumerable privations, at last reached the goal towards which he had set his course.

In this young man, with his clear-cut features, steady eyes and determined, quiet mien, we see not he who has accomplished great deeds, feats of daring and thrilling adventures; rather do we see ourselves. In him is embodied that spiritual part of us which would soar forth on high adventure; who would wing swiftly through the dangerous courses of the air; who would go out to battle with the fierce enemies of the poles and win.

What greater tribute can we pay to Richard E. Byrd than to say he is as we should like to be. It was human to envy the wealth of a man, though rarely the man himself. But so pronounced is our envy that it is only a Byrd or a Lindbergh whom we would really patterns our lives from were we able.

It may be that those brave eyes which pierced the gloom, searching for land on that memorable flight to Europe, or winging his way across the dreary expanse of the poles will ever rest upon this, our humble acknowledgement of his supreme efforts. But we hope that the silent, unseen spirit in the urge of this little manifestation of our pride in him, will speed in some manner to the recesses of his being and blossom in his heart.

And what preparations Boston is making for tomorrow afternoon, to show Admiral Byrd how proud it is of him and the gallant crew who accompanied him. Too many to enumerate here are the events and programs which will take place from the moment he arrives until late into the evening. He will be an exceedingly busy young man.

But whatever he says and wherever he goes there is pretty sure to be a microphone somewhere near, over which the public who cannot be near the arena of events may be appraised of every happening, and even hear Admiral Byrd himself.

Among the various stations of Boston who are taking an active part in announcing the events of the afternoon and evening is the Boston Evening American broadcasting studio personnel, under the supervision of Arthur G. Roberts, who will give interesting details of happenings over WHDH.

Promptly at 1:15 you will get the highlights of the great reception and the forming of the welcoming parade at the South Station where a microphone has been installed. From this point the control will be shifted to the Parkman Bandstand, on the Common, where another WHDH "mike" has been arranged for, and from where you will learn what is taking place in that section. The broadcast will continue at the Common until Admiral Byrd's train arrives, when once more you will learn of every event direct from that point.

Tomorrow Admiral Richard E. Byrd will own the city; and it is well. He is a dreamer, but he has made his dreams come true. He is an example to the young, an inspiration to the middle-aged, and a joy to the elderly. We salute him.

PORT OF BOSTON NEWS

By CARL MORRISON

Flat on his back on a hard cot in Boston City Hospital is Thomas Jones, 35, married, and father of five young children. Tommy is recovering from an operation which removed part of one foot which had been injured a few days ago in a railroad accident.

Tommy, better known on the waterfront as "Jonah Jones," has at least two reasons for being discouraged. First of all, his accident was not in the course of his work and therefore he may not have compensation. Secondly, he will leave the hospital to face plenty of grocery and rent bills—with no job awaiting him.

Tommy is a hatch foreman, but his injury will prevent his doing this type of work again. Hatch foremen must step lively.

Is Tommy discouraged?

He laughs to his friends:

"I'm not licked yet. I'll make out somehow."

His friends are cheered to know that he is gaining strength and is full of courage. They hint that his refusal to give up will win him help. The waterfront never goed back on its members.

Boys of Local 803 of the I. L. A. are one of those stepping in to cheer Tommy. He has visitors, too, from military organizations. He is a veteran of the army and navy.

"Gee, a guy can't quit when he has kids to take care of. I'll make out somehow. . ."

BOSTONIANS APLOAT

"DUTY TO CARGO"

Today's chapter in the booklet entitled "Duty to Cargo," by Thomas G. Plant of the American-Hawaiian, reads:

"A costly piece of machinery may arrive at the dock with its base cracked. It would be folly for the carrier to let it go forward in that condition. The base would have to be renewed by consignee and, if his local foundry happened not to have facilities for this particular kind of job, it might well mean that the whole machine would have to be shipped back to the factory. According, in such an instance, the alert carrier notifies the shipper so that he can replace the damaged piece before shipment. The time saving time and money for shipper and consignee and trouble for all concerned."

TODAY'S WHO'S WHO

Quinn's father was in the business before him, and his brothers are also connected. Quinn is known as the man of the stevedores, and he sets an example for younger men to shoot for a job in the docks at 7 or 8 a. m. He works all day tireless-ly, and this has helped to win him the esteem of his associates.

T. F. Quinn

This member of the Maritime Association is one of the few surviving natives of "Quinn's Fort Hill." He was in the House of Representatives from Sharon while Governor Allen was a member of that body. Quinn also was a selectman of Sharon.

This prominent harbor figure plans to sail from New York in a few days for a two months' vacation in Europe, his "first time off" in many years.

UNITED FRUIT OUTING

Some 400 employes of the United Fruit Co. and their friends are expected for the annual outing next Saturday. This will again be held at Clem Kennedy's New Ocean House in Swampscott. A golf tournament is being arranged by Walter Simmons and Charlie Laffie. Nick Grace has the tennis tourney in charge. Others on the committee consists of William Hughes, prez.; and the following board of governors: Tom McCormack, William Kehoe, Jean Bastney, Mrs. Winfield Grant and Miss Mary Mantor.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

John Poole, second settler in Rockport and builder of first frame house there in 1700, was also first man who furnished the lumber in 1710 for building the original Long Wharf in Boston.

MODERN MARINER

"Saw Tommy Logan of South Boston practicing for his bicycle racing. Overheard Mickie Ford of Luckenbach line insist he is a bigger man than Ty Webb of East Boston, but we'll have to find some WEIGH of settling the dispute. Was told that Frank Wall is practicing with his brother, Abe, for next fall, when Frankie plans to enter the wrestling profession."

Foley and Garrett

District Attorney Shows Proper Spirit

To date, Oliver B. Garrett may seem to have the laugh on the law. But none of us would be willing to trade places with him. Sooner or later this glib young man will find himself in custody again, with the record of his flight from trial as an additional hurdle to surmount when he faces court.

The hunt for Garrett certainly must not be relinquished. The very fact of his being at large is an affront to the law. An incident of this kind surely cannot be permitted to remain indefinitely a black mark against the Commonwealth.

District Attorney William J. Foley has shown the proper spirit in taking the lead in the pursuit of Garrett. He asserts he will not be stopped until this man is brought to book in court, and his actions thus far bear out his words. He obviously realizes that the public is looking to him to do his full duty, and unless he fails to carry on as he should he is entitled to all the help and encouragement the citizens can give him.

He has encountered some discouraging obstacles already in the Garrett matter, including the episode of the incarcerating of John F. Sullivan, his chief witness, in an asylum. He has been the object of a whispering campaign that cannot but have embarrassed him. But these things have not halted the quick advancement of the case; first, to the grand jury and thence to the courtroom, where an able, honest and courageous judge, David F. Dillon, stood ready to hear the evidence. This activity in itself is sufficient answer to Mr. Foley's critics, as matters stand today. Tomorrow will tell its own story.

The Prince of Wales

He Explains Why He Is a Bachelor

The Prince of Wales had a birthday this week—somewhat obscured in the public eye by the arrival of the Lindbergh baby the day before. However, the Prince also made quite a splurge thirty-six years ago when he began his career, and this anniversary should not be overlooked.

Getting married is a personal business. The Prince has certain rights in the matter—including the right to remain a bachelor if he wishes. But his persistent refusal to take a bride and raise heirs to the throne is a perpetual source of interest to most of the civilized people on the globe. Especially the feminine half.

With Lindbergh married, he is the world's greatest catch. Not too old, good looking, plucky, charming, wealthy, fond of travel—you could recite his qualifications indefinitely. But still he keeps them guessing.

The Prince himself explained it some time ago, according to report, on historical grounds.

"England had a virgin queen once who was a great success," he said. "Why not try a virgin king?"

H. G. Wells Writes

WE HAVE written so if the germ-plasm were absolutely fixed and unalterable in these pure lines. And, indeed, heredity is from its essence a conservative force. It goes back to the old, old story. Beans beget beans, dogs beget dogs, men beget men, generation after generation. But heredity is not absolutely stable. The germ-plasm is ever so slightly restless; it shifts now and then and changes. It turns over in its sleep, so to speak, and the race alters a little.

H. G. Wells

Twice, while he was carrying out his elaborate painstaking experiments, did Johannsen detect such a change in the chromosomes.

Twice did he witness a little jerk of evolutionary progress. On each occasion the progeny of one bean gave an average bean weight a little different from that of the pure line to which it belonged. In one case the new beans were lighter, in the other heavier.

Though the difference was not great it was constant in the resulting strain, generation after generation. Something had happened in the chromosomes, and the germ plasm was permanently changed. This kind of variation biologists call mutation. Mutation is here a scientific term, and not an ordinary word; it is the special name for a variation of the germ-plasm itself.

But before we leave our beans let us pause for a second and point a moral. For they teach us something about method.

If Johannsen had worked with a handful of commercial bean seed lumped together, it would have appeared is if selection did produce a hereditary effect, and the fact that single mutations occasionally cropped up could never have been established.

It was precisely a realization of the value of this same individual method, which, together with patience, clear thinking and a certain good fortune in the choice of material led the Abbe Mendel to the discoveries on which are based all our modern intimate knowledge of heredity.

With those discoveries our next section will deal.

Section 2

The Discoveries of the Abbe Mendel

The pure line experiments tell us a good deal about what is not inherited and about the precautions needed in making experiments on inheritance, and they make it clear that what is inherited is something very definite, capable of remaining unchanged over a long series of generations.

The microscope has, moreover, made it practically certain that the hereditary constitution is contained in the chromosomes. But neither pure line experiments nor microscopical observation tell us anything important about the actual nature and composition of this inheritance. The clues to that problem come from another direction; they were put on record by the Abbe Mendel and in a quite different fashion.

HEIR-MINDED

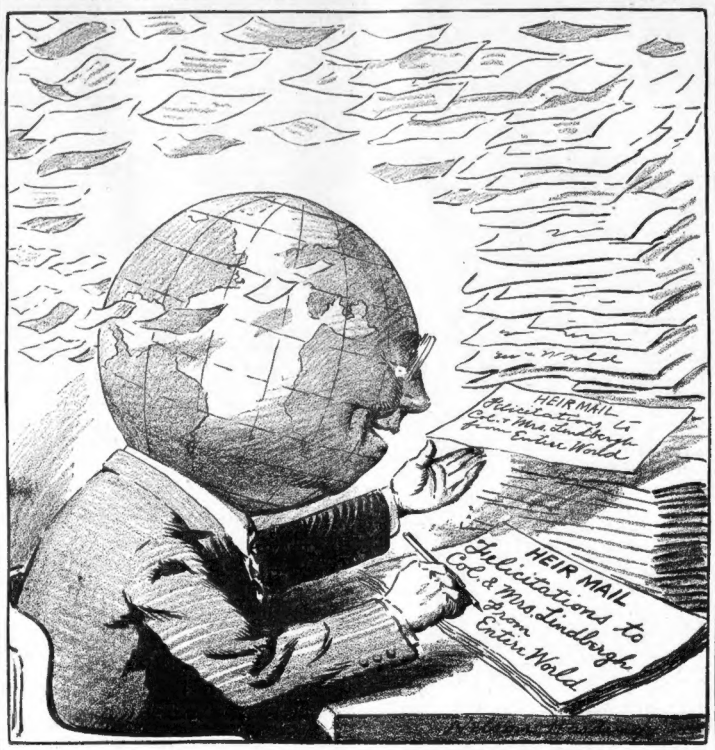
By NELSON HARDING



The world, heir-minded, thinks as one,
And trusting you'll forgive the pun
We merely offer our small share
Of greetings to the son and heir.

And from all corners of the earth
Now, when the world refers to "We"

McINTYRE ABROAD

By O. O. McIntyre

ON THE ATLANTIC, June 26—An Atlantic voyage attracts a collection of types as distinct as a first night at the Metropolitan, the opening of Belmont or a Ziegfeld premiere. There are few places so suspicious for strutting as a ship's salon, smoker or promenade deck.

There is invariably the art dealer whose coat lapel is threaded with the red of French honors. Also the glacial lady with heavily kohled eyes and bright nails who becomes "the mystery woman." She smokes cigarettes through a long holder and has a French maid named Fifi.

She is variously reported as the crepe de China companion of an international banker or an American wife incognito galloping to Paris for a week-end divorce. Too, the blond dancing twins on their way to fill an engagement at the Kit Kat or some other London night club.

In the bar will always be found a tweedy and monocled fellow who only lifts his face from what must be an absorbing book long enough to say "Cheerio Reggie" or "Howdjudu Trevor" to some passing acquaintance. He sips tea all day long and you can have my stock in him —at panic prices.

The salon may be depended upon to furnish at least one lorgnette lifting and dumpy dowager of whom some blundering yap will inquire: "First trip?" only to receive her withering: "Forty-second!" accompanied by a high nosed sniff. She has a dried up little husband who trots after her like a poodle.

Then there is the trigger-minded wordling who is always saying the things you wish you might have said. He knows everybody on the boat and is calling the Captain "Cap" the second day out. He is the sort you don't care to talk to but you somehow want him around.

• • •

An ocean voyage stresses the nuisance of the telephone in our high keyed civilization. Telephoning to ships has not reached the stage of bother as yet and the relief is a high spot. When I acquire coupon clipping callouses I intend to have a dead telephone placed under glass in my up-the-Hudson castle and bound out of bed every morning to dance around and thumb my nose at it.

The only two books visible in the captain's quarters were "History of the United States" and "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes."

Incidentally, I am told the lady-whose-name-is-not-mentioned-here recently sent the society reporter of a New York paper an autographed copy of a book she authored reading:

"To Maury—WHO I Adore!"

• • •

Perhaps the most discussed couple aboard ship is a high jumping flapper with a wild frizz of orange hair and a sleek black-haired gigolo type. She wears sandals, but no stockings, and they walk around deck sipping brandy from wide and delicately flanged glasses. They seem perpetually blotto. The rumor is they are newly-weds from Chicago, but I am one of those "O, Yeah?" boys who always suspect the worst—and I wonder why they call it the worst?

• • •

In a short while we sight the Scilly Islands—pronounced "Silly." I have always had a hunch some of my forbears came from there.

• • •

The ship's bells have just tolled 4 a. m. The aquamarine blue of the sea is tinged with the lovely pink of another glorious dawn. And forgive a softie for recalling that beautiful and classic line:

Listen, World!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Rebel!

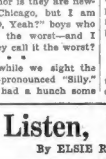
DON'T BE resigned!

Don't sit down in the midst "of your misery—and say—everything is for the best because it is God's will."

Everything that happens ISN'T for the best. Most of our troubles are the direct result of our own stupidity and carelessness and they can be licked if we want to lick them. Nor has there ever been the slightest proof that God will be annoyed if we do.



Elsie Robinson

We have already licked many of them. Once people accepted smallpox, diphtheria, yellow fever, dungeons, slavery, illiteracy and other unspeakable conditions as crosses sent from God. Millions agonized and died, resigning themselves without a struggle to the Divine Will But certain others DOUBTED, REBELLED and GOT BUSY—created serums, fought wars, made laws.

And now we no longer pass the buck to God if a family dies from typhoid through drinking tainted milk. We know that God did not will that tragedy but that we wished it on ourselves through our own neglect.

The slave pens and fever swamps of 1830 have disappeared. But there are still slave pens and fever swamps in your own life. Don't endure them! Don't be patient with them! LET YOURSELF REBEL!

For Rebellion is already with you. It was in you when you were born—it is in all creatures when they are born. It is the reason why they are born.

That urge for fuller, freer life is not something you have created. It is something God created. It is the voice of God, crying out in you—reaching out in you for something better than you have or are.

Before ever man walked or birds flew or beasts prowled, there was Rebellion in the world. It moved like a Presence over the face of the deep, through the steam and chaos of creation. When life was only a lump of jelly, that jelly rebelled. It reached toward fuller, freer forms.

It grew tails and fins and leaves and roots and legs and wings and, finally, a brain. And so came trees and flowers and Man—the fruit of that Rebellion. And now Man, in his turn, rebels and reaches toward still greater life.

The lump of jelly did not think. It did not even feel. It only responded to a desire that the Creator put in it. Man does think, but the urge in him and the urge in that formless jelly are the same urge—part of the same great purpose and plan.

There IS a "will of God"—but it is not a Will toward sickness and sin and poverty and death. It is a Will toward health and happiness and more abundant life. And the rebellion in you is the voice of that Will, driving you on.

Do you disregard that voice. Do you stifle it with your laziness or cowardice. It is the greatest and most sacred thing in you. Rebel! Find your place in the sun!

Happy Mother and Father

And a Thrice Happy Little Baby

If there is anything in good wishes, sincere sympathy, how happy Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh and their new born baby should be today.

Millions of women all over the world have thought with affection of the mother and her child. And all men that can read wish happiness for the father and mother and their little son.

How fortunately is that baby born. He starts out with the world's good will. His father and mother possess the qualities that make good citizens, good MEN AND WOMEN.

They are courageous, modest, democratic, INTELLIGENT. They are deeply interested in each other, anxious to be of use in the world, both setting a good example from every point of view. Truly, they are to be admired and congratulated.

As for the little baby, consider his fortunate inheritance! On his father's side he gets the blood of men from the north that came southward, conquering, through stormy seas, thousands of years ago.

It was the spirit of the old Vikings that carried Lindbergh, alone, over the ocean.

The legend describes the Prince Gautama, afterward the Buddha, riding slowly through rows of his people, and a young girl crying out, "Nibutta, Nibutta, happy the father, happy the mother of such a son."

In the case of this little baby, so interesting everywhere, the cry will be "Happy the child of such a father and mother." May he live long to honor his father and his mother in this land of opportunity and honor them truly in SERVICE, as they have honored their fathers and mothers, and the country that produced them.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Who would wish for a bird in a cage, denied
The forests so thick and the plains so wide?
It is out of the depths of the wood-land green
Or up from the meadows' emerald sheen
That the joyous song of the birds should float
A bird's wide wings, to be strong, must be

The tides of rapture that strongly flow
Through the notes of the wild bird winging on
Under a single silver star.
